Thought To Have Been Member of Ill Fated Christmas Schooner.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Manitowoc, Dec. 7.—Edward Murphy, a former Manitowoc man and who has been in the west until recently, may have been a member of the crew of the ill fated Christmas ship, the schooner, believed to lie at the bottom of the lake off Two Rivers point north of this city. The name of Edward Murphy appears in the list of the crew of the missing schooner and relatives here fear that the Manitowoc man is the man. Murphy had a nephew, a namesake, at Chicago, and there is a possibility that he is the sailor on the ship. Murphy is known to have been in Chicago and to have sailed on some boat. The Two Rivers life saving crew patrolled the lake as far north as Sandy Bay yesterday, but found no further trace of the missing schooner.

OLD SOLDIERS BUY

Forty Thousand Christmas Seals Sold
At Wisconsin Soldiers' Home.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
West Allis, Wis., Dec. 7.—As a result of the enthusiastic support of the old soldiers, nearly forty thousand Red Cross Christmas Seals have already been disposed of at the National Soldiers' Home this year. The fourth consignment of ten thousand seals was secured on Tuesday by Dr. J. W. Ackerly, who has charge of the sales at the Home, and most of them have been sold.

This means a contribution from these old veterans of nearly four hundred dollars to the public health crusade of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association.

"Having gone through the thickest of that bloody war, I can appreciate the extent and horror of the needless slaughter from consumption when I read that it kills more people in the United States in the same time than were lost by both sides in the Civil War," one aged veteran modestly replied when complimented on his generous support of the seal campaign. "It's not likely that I'll be living this time next year and I want to do all I can before I go."

This spirit is manifest by many of the old heroes. They not only buy as man as the can afford but sell them to outside people and come back for more. These old men write few letters and have little chance to use the seals in this manner but the invent all sorts of queer uses for them. Many put them on their uniform buttons and every available object on the gear.

One old man has entirely papered his wooden leg with Red Cross Seals.

Commenting on the interest taken by the old patriots, Dr. J. W. Ackerly the surgeon who has charge of the sale of seals said, "There is an exceptionally great amount of tuberculosis among the old soldiers, due probably to several different causes. Alcoholism is partly responsible and the hard devalizing conditions of the life they have caused many to succumb."

DISCOVER SCANDAL;
SELL DECORATIONS

Many Persons Duped by Clever Gang
Of Crooks Working Through Europe.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Brussels, Belgium, Dec. 7.—A great scandal in connection with the foreign decorations was brought to light here today. Numerous demands for authorization to wear the grand cordon of the Double Dragon of China had aroused the suspicions of the Belgian foreign office from which subjects must obtain permission before they may decorate their button holes or break with the insignia of a foreign order of chivalry.

Inquiries showed that the Chinese delegation had no knowledge of the granting of any such orders to Belgian subjects. The diplomats, however, were found to be genuine and it was later that they had been stolen from the Chinese legation in London.

Further investigation revealed the fact that a wide spread business in decorations was being carried on by a man named Lazard whose arrest was at once ordered. The concern has branches in many different countries. The orders usually dealt in were the Lion and Sun, Persia, the Liberator of Venezuela and the Double Dragon of China and many forged diplomas of these orders of chivalry were found in one of the branch offices.

TWO LAKE VESSELS
ESCAPED DESTRUCTION

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Manitowoc, Dec. 7.—Two Goodrich boats, the Chicago and Shelby, old sidewheelers of the line, which are moored up river here came near being completely wrecked and ended for all time during a gale which swept this city yesterday. The new 260 foot steel floating dock, recently built by the dry docks company and moored at the yards tore from moorings and swung across the river, crashing into the two wooden boats of the Goodrich line. The fact that the boats were moored to spring piling which gave way as the boats struck it saved them from heavy damage though both are somewhat injured. The dock is steel construction and heavy and the weight would have crushed the two boats to bits had the impact been solid.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
La Crosse, Wis., Dec. 7.—A white Plymouth rock hen on display at the Western Wisconsin Poultry Show and valued at $200 last night, was worth twice that sum today as the result of swallowing a $200 ruby which dropped from a setting in a ring worn by Charles V. Keeler, of Wilmamaw, Ind., one of the judges. The hen belongs to L. C. Danville of Montfort, Wis. While Keeler was about to examine the bird, the most valuable in the show, the gem dropped, and quick as a flash the hen gulped it down. Keeler offered Danville $300 for the bird and subsequently increased the bid to $400, but the latter refused both offers and the loser left for home today without his ruby.

AT A MASS MEETING

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Eng., Dec. 7.—For half an hour John Redmond, the Irish leader of the suffragettes whose interruptions and desperate resistance caused a rapid succession of rough and tumble scenes of the most rowdy description. The occasion was a home rule demonstration at Dalston in Northeast London. Men as well as women were thrown bodily out of the hall. Among the men were some clergymen who had protested against the rough handling of the women. During the half hour Mr. Redmond was able to utter only a single sentence which was to the effect that it seemed to him almost tragic that the woman's cause which in the minds and hearts of so many was so great, should be turned into a comic interlude.

AUTHORITIES NOTIFIED

Have Been Missing Since Wednesday

—Murder and Suicide Hinted.
Reported to District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie that the bodies of a man and woman had been found in the woods near Milton, the district attorney and Sheriff Ransom made a hurried trip there to investigate.

The bodies were reported as those of Miss Emma Fiedler and Will Kunkle. It is believed that Kunkle shot the girl and then killed himself. The position and condition of the bodies is such as would indicate they died on Wednesday last.

The bodies were found in the woods on the Clark Kidder farm, four miles west of Milton, early this afternoon. The dead woman is the daughter of Will Fiedler, while Kunkle is married and lived on the Aiken farm. It is believed that the man was infatuated with the woman and that he ended her life and then his own.

The bodies were found by Richard Kunkle, a brother of the dead man, at two-thirty this afternoon. The bodies were left exactly as discovered until the arrival of the district attorney and sheriff.

The two went hunting on Wednesday. She is a sister-in-law of Kunkle, who leaves a widow and one child. Details of the tragedy are most meagre.

GAVE INFORMATION
AS TO BUILDINGS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Indianapolis, Dec. 7.—Many letters which passed between John J. McNamara, secretary of the iron workers union, and William E. Reddin, Milwaukee, a local business agent, were read by the government in its cross-examination of Reddin at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial today. Reddin testified that Milwaukee was the headquarters of a structure of steel firm, against which the union had called a strike, and McNamara was accustomed to write asking about jobs to be put up by the firm.

The witness said he usually supplied the information, but he denied it ever was used in connection with explosions.

As the eighth of the forty-one defendants to testify, Fred J. Mooney, of Duluth, Minn., explained letters he wrote to McNamara during the period of the explosions about the country were frequent. Mooney testified he told McNamara labor conditions at Duluth were "slavery."

Three days after the blowing up of an unloading rig on the docks at Superior, Wis., in August, 1910, Mooney said he wrote to McNamara a "real dynamite" had visited there. He said he meant only to convey news of the explosion, although he personally had nothing to do with it. Orlie B. McManis, confessed to the Superior explosions.

Peruna Critics Say

That There Was Nothing Wonderful in the Recovery of Mrs. Eberlein.

Dr. Hartman Replies.

Of course my narrative concerning Mrs. Eberlein, of Pittsburg, who was rescued from apparent death by Peruna, has excited a good deal of discussion and comment. One critic has offered the following solution. He says that the reason Peruna cured Mrs. Eberlein at such a stage of the disease is explained as follows:

She was probably very weak. She became unable to expectorate. The consequence was huge accumulations of mucus and phlegm gathered in the lungs. On account of her weakness she was unable to expel it. It was slowly strangling her to death.

Peruna stimulated her, enabled her to cough up and spit out the accumulated phlegm. This explains why she was cured. There was no miracle about it. Nothing wonderful either.

To all of which I say, yes, of course. That may be the explanation. And yet it remains true that without the Peruna she would have died. It remains true that I got there just in time to save her life. The doctors had given her up to die. She was gasping for breath, unconscious, cold in short, dying, however, it is explained, the Peruna saved her life. Of course it did.

I do not believe in miracles myself. I believe there is a natural explanation for everything. Peruna helped Mrs. Eberlein to expel from her lungs the accumulated expectation, and thus saved her life. Good.

I presume Mrs. Eberlein is just as thankful that she is alive with one explanation as with another, and I am just as thankful that I was able to cure her whatever the explanation may be.

NOVEMBER REPORTS OF MAIL CARRIED

Postmaster Valentine Has Sent Reports of Mail Handled by Rural Carriers to Washington.

Reports showing the amount of mail delivered and collected by the rural carriers out of the Janesville postoffice have been completed by Postmaster C. L. Valentine, and have been sent to the postoffice department at Washington, for use in the completing of final arrangements for the establishment of the parcels post system throughout the country on the first of January. Instructions were received from the department some time ago to keep records and report on the amount of mail handled by each carrier during the months of October and November. These reports were compiled at the end of each month, and have been sent to the department by the local postmaster.

During the month of November, 15,537 pieces of mail were delivered by the nine rural carriers from the Janesville postoffice, the number of pieces of each class delivered being as follows: First class, letters and post cards, 23,398; second class, newspapers, magazines, etc., 45,401; third class, printed matter, circulars, 11,977; fourth class, all other mailable matter, 333; franked and official mail, 428.

The total weight of the mail delivered was 11,256 pounds and two ounces, over five and a half tons. The total weight of each class of mail delivered was: first class, 472 pounds, 5 oz.; 2nd class, 9,099 pounds; 3rd class, 1,423 pounds, 3 oz.; 4th class, 252 pounds, 15 oz.; franked mail, 58 pounds, 11 oz.

Records of mail collected from the rural carriers' routes show 14,307 pieces were collected during the month, the total being made up of the following number of pieces in each class: 1st class, 10,914; 2nd, 115; 3rd, 3,202; 4th, 75; franked and official mail, 1.

The mail collected weighed in the aggregate, 896 lbs., 7 oz. Weights of mail in the various classes: 1st, 270 lbs., 10 oz.; 2nd, 47 lbs., 1 oz.; 3rd, 338 lbs.; 4th, 40 lbs., 11 oz.; franked, 1 oz.

From these figures it is shown that the nine carriers handled over six tons of mail during the twenty-five days of delivery, the total weight of mail delivered and collected being 12,152 pounds, and 7 ounces. The daily average of each carrier was fifty-three and a half pounds and four hundred and twenty-five pieces of mail handled.

Harvey Gets Verdict of $195 for Animal Killed by Lightning—Two Juries Out at Same Time.

Reversing the decision secured in the Janesville municipal court, Ralph H. Harvey, residing near Evansville, was awarded a verdict of $195 against the Farmers' Insurance Company of the town of Union in the circuit court yesterday afternoon, to reimburse him for a registered Holstein heifer which the jury decided was killed by lightning as the plaintiff alleged.

Two juries deliberating at the same time was the peculiar situation in the court yesterday, and the jury on the case which was tried last was the first to reach a verdict. The action was that of Frank M. Farmer vs. John Lindstrom, both Beloit men, a case also appealed from the Janesville municipal court where the verdict was in favor of the defendant.

The case involved the possession of a tea and coffee delivery wagon which was claimed by both parties. The jury decided that the plaintiff was the rightful owner of the vehicle which they valued at $8.75 and they also found that the plaintiff was not entitled to damages for the time that the wagon was retained by the defendant. The jury in this case returned a verdict at 4:10 o'clock and the jury in the insurance case came in at 4:40 o'clock after deliberating two hours.

At the close of court yesterday the jurors were dismissed as all the cases for the October jury calendar have been disposed of. This was one of the longest jury terms in the local court for years, continuing approximately for three weeks. The Bergsterman murder case and the Baird vs. Carle suit took up two-thirds of the time, while the few other matters were of slight importance and did not take long for trial. A large number of cases on the calendar were settled or continued to the next term, or transferred to the court calendar. Had they all been for trial at this time the jurors would have been busy until Christmas.

Some thirty court cases on the October calendar are still to be tried. Judge Grimm will have business in Madison for a part of next week, but expects to be at the court chambers on Thursday to begin the trials of the actions under "facts for court."

WORK ON NEW BRIDGE

HAS BEEN STARTED

Crew of Ironworkers Has Begun Work Preliminary to Erection of New Railroad Bridge.

Work preliminary to the erection of the new joint railroad bridge across Rock river to replace the one now used, jointly by the St. Paul and Northwestern railroads has been begun, and for several months hence, crews of laborers engaged in this kind of work will be kept busy until the new bridge is ready for use. The crew of ironworkers, which was expected here earlier in the week, but which had to be used elsewhere for several days, reached here Thursday and have commenced their work. A pile-driver and bridge crew from Fond du Lac came yesterday, and it is expected their labors will commence the first of next week. The ironworkers, it is understood, are making preparations to raise the level of the present bridge, so as to raise the steel structural work up from the piers and make it possible to shift the structural work and tracks, so as to separate the tracks of the two companies farther. The present bridge, it is said, has settled slightly, and in order to make the shift, it will be necessary to raise the tracks about eighteen inches.

The crew which arrived here yesterday, it is reported will start at work on Monday, making the preparations, for putting in the concrete piers of the new bridge. Piles and other materials have been unloaded here and caissons will be made for the construction of the concrete piers. Piles for the caissons will be driven into the river and the work commenced on the St. Paul side of the bridge, so as to allow the shifting of the Northwestern's portion of the bridge first. Operators will be placed at both ends of the bridge to control the movements of trains and prevent accidents, as both railroads will have to use one side of the bridge while the work on the other side is being carried on.

MRS. WORRY.

BY C. A. VOIGHT.

If you have any pity to spare, let it go to the baseball catcher. He doesn't go long these days. After four or five years of steady work the strain tells on him and it's all off. Three years ago Charley Street and Charley Schmidt of the Detroit team were as good a pair of backstops as you could find. Today they're having hard work to keep in the minors. It's the same with many others that might be mentioned. There are few veteran catchers today in the big leagues.

Motorcycle polo is the latest wrinkle in the realm of sport. It was given its first trial in Kansas the other day. Mallets similar to croquet mallets were used. The ball was about the size of a football. There were three players on each side. At the "kickoff" the ball was placed in the center of the field midway between two goals. At a signal from the referee both teams charged full upon the ball, one lucky player getting a good whack at it and sending it with great force and violence toward the enemy's goal.

Dan McKetrick, manager of Joe Jeanette, insists that his protegee has earned the heavyweight championship. "I had Johnson cornered last spring," says McKetrick, "and just as I notified him that I would leave for Chicago to post $10,000 in support of it, a so-called match was announced as arranged with Jim Flynn. You know what a farce the fight was, but it served its purpose to wit, keeping Johnson from a forced match with Jeanette."

The recent auction of horses at Madison Square Garden, New York, showed about the healthiest market that has been known in a decade. The prices paid for stallions, brood mares, etc., revealed a most prosperous condition in the horse world. For instance, Gay Audobon went at $7,750 and Dave Halle at $6,000. The prices fetched by Guy Axworthy, $4,200, and Bon Voyage, $3,300, bought entirely for breeding purposes, were also very fair.

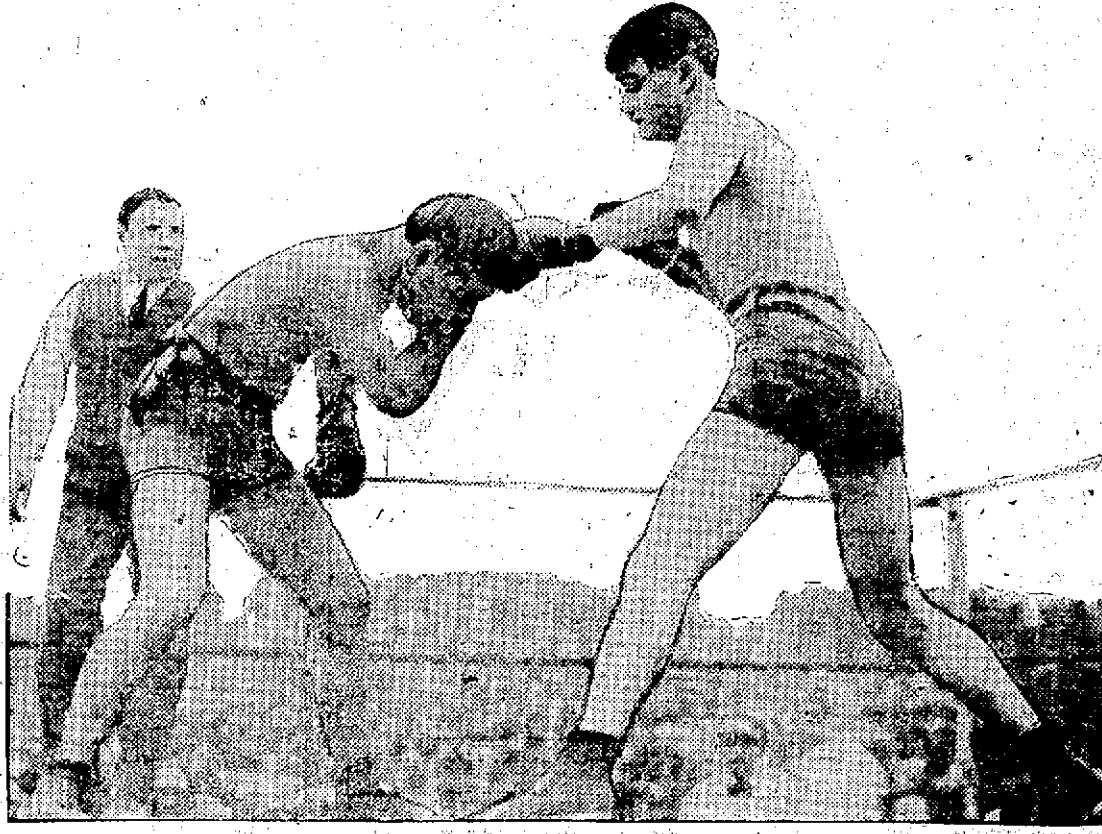

The sale of yearlings at the New York auction revealed most clearly the healthiness of the trotting industry. In buying yearlings most purchasers expect to have to wait two or three years, at least, in some instances longer, before realizing much, yet at the New York sale one yearling fetched $2,600, another $2,300, a third $2,000, and forty-five others averaged more than $600.

Joe Tinker of the Chicago Cubs, disappointed at not getting the chance to pilot the Cincinnati Reds next year, will quit baseball for a time at least and try his luck at vaudeville.

The curtain is about to fall on the ring career of little Johnny Coulon, bantam champion. He can't hold out much longer and probably within a few weeks he'll be an "ex."

Four new dolls are not after his crown: Kid Williams, the hardhitting Baltimore boy; Eddie Morgan, the British boxer; Charley Ledoux, the fighting chet from old Paree; and Eddie Camp, the clever San Francisco lad.

Of these four, Williams looks the best.

Pictures of the Volga-Ritchie battle at San Francisco give some idea of the new champion's superiority. The accompanying picture shows Ritchie landing one of his numerous lefts to Volga's head.

Frogs Foretell the Weather.

The green tree-frogs are often used in Germany as barometers; they are placed in tall bottles, with little wooden ladders. The steps of the ladder mark, as it were, the degrees; the frogs always go upwards the top in fine weather and lower down at the approach of bad weather. Germans often consult their frogs when starting on a picnic expedition.

TIGERS TO BE GIVEN A HUGE SHAKE-UP

George Mullin.

When President Navin and Manager Jennings of the Detroit Tigers attend the annual meeting of the American league about to be held at Chicago they will be prepared to make trades of all kinds. Among the veterans who will go on the market is Pitcher George Mullin.

Mullin has been pitching for Detroit since 1902. His name has been mentioned in connection with trades and sales for several years, but he still hangs on as a permanent member of the Tigers despite his published statement that he would never pitch another game for Detroit.

FORMER SALOON MAN HELD TO U. S. COURT

Patrick Rider Summoned Before U. S. Court Commissioner Tallman For Violation of Internal Revenue Laws.

On a warrant issued by the federal district court for the western district of Wisconsin, served by Deputy Marshal William Appleby, Patrick J. Rider of Footville, appeared before U. S. Court Commissioner Stanley D. Tallman this morning to answer to a complaint charging him with violation of the internal revenue laws, and was bound over to appear before the court at the February term. He furnished bonds of $270 and was released. The specific charge against Rider is that of refilling a bottle bearing strip stamps and caution notices showing the contents to have been bottled in bond, in violation of Section 6 of the Act of March 3, 1897, forbidding such practices. The offense is alleged to have been committed on April 19, 1912, while Rider was in the saloon business in this city at 220 West Milwaukee street. Shortly before the new licenses were granted by the council in July of this year, he transferred his license to Adolph Brickson. Since retiring from the liquor business, he has been living on a farm about a mile and a half from Footville.

According to the complaint, Rider took a bottle which had contained liquor bottled in bond and refilled it with other liquor selling it as the liquor originally contained in bottle. This constitutes an offense against the federal statutes and the offense could have been detected by testing the liquor in the bottle and comparing the results of the test with the percentage specified on the label of the bottle.

HOW LONG CAN YOU REMEMBER HOW THE BABY LOOKS TODAY?

Perhaps a year or two, and then the recollection grows hazy.

And if anything happened to the dear little one and you had neglected securing a good photograph of him could you ever forgive yourself?

If he is spared to you, grows into a fine stalwart man, don't you suppose he will treasure his "baby" picture?

Surely!

Still time if you come at once to secure some really good photographs of him which the family will appreciate more than any other Christmas gift you might send.

Two Kinds of Education-- Which Do You Prefer?

What is education?

Does it mean going to college, getting a diploma and then at the age of 22 or 23 or 24 first beginning to learn how to make a living?

IS THAT EDUCATION?

Or is it learning while you are young the "education that gets the money" so that you can go out in the world and pull down one of those fat, healthy pay-envelopes that every Business College graduate CAN and DOES command?

Which education do YOU want?

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

One day a ragged little fellow, about ten years old, was standing before a shoe store on Broadway, barefooted, peering through the window and shivering with cold. A lady riding up the street in a beautiful carriage ordered her driver to stop in front of the store. The lady, richly robed, went to the boy and said:

"Little boy, why are you looking so earnestly in that window?"
"I was just asking God to give me a pair of shoes. Mama told me I prays he would if I asked him," was the reply.

The lady took him by the hand and went into the store and asked the proprietor if he would allow one of his clerks to go and buy her a half dozen pairs of stockings. The proprietor cheerfully assented. She then asked him if he could give her a basin of water and a towel, and he replied, "Certainly," and quickly brought them to her.

She took the little fellow to the back part of the store, and, removing her gloves, washed and rubbed those cold little feet and dried them with the towel.

By this time the young man had returned with the stockings. Placing a pair on the boy's feet, she purchased and gave him a pair of shoes. Then she tied up the remaining pairs of stockings, banded them to him, and, patting him on the head, she smiled and said: "Now, my little fellow, you feel more comfortable, I'm sure."

As she turned to go, the astonished lad caught her hand, and, looking up into her face, eagerly exclaimed, "Are you an angel?"

The "Christian Herald" tells this little story, so suggestive of childlike faith. The mind of the little boy had no trouble in tracing the connection between the God whom he had never seen, and one of His representatives, a question which many more mature minds find it difficult to grasp.

The Rev. Zering, who spoke at the Methodist Brotherhood meeting, the other night, told the story of a little boy who prayed persistently every night for a bicycle. The family exchequer did not warrant the purchase of a bicycle and so the little lad was surprised to find in his room a tricycle.

When he retired that night, the folks in the other room were a little shocked at his criticism, for after expressing thanks for the machine, he said, "But Oh, God, didn't you know the difference between a bicycle and a tricycle?"

The faith of the child is sublime, and as the holiday season approaches it finds expression in the simple mis- sives, which crowd the mails, addressed to the old patron saint, who brings so much of joy and Christmas cheer to the little people.

This sacred delusion haunts the mind of the child; long after the discovery is made and Santa Claus would be a myth but for the army of willing helpers, who cheerfully perform his mission.

The discovery is not a shock, but rather a glad disappointment, because it inspires the heart to join the army and thus contribute to the volume of good cheer at Christmas time.

The "good fellows" in Chicago, who respond so liberally to the call of old Saint Nick, on Christmas eve, are simply children of larger growth, who retain the memory and emulate the spirit of earlier years.

These memories of the old chimney corner, with the patter of little feet on the stairs, in the cold gray light of Christmas morning, warm the heart, until the spirit of good fellowship becomes the prevailing spirit, at this season of the year, and all over the land, white-winged angels in sordid attire, are preparing to make some heart glad on Christmas morning.

It is to be regretted that this same spirit does not prevail to larger extent, throughout the year. There are plenty of people who find joy and satisfaction in impersonating the old patron saint, who would consider it sacrilege if asked to answer their own prayers.

We encourage our children to write letters to Santa Claus, and then we take the letters and answer the requests as far as consistent. Why? Because we know that they will never be answered in any other way, and we respect the faith of the child and want to make it happy.

But Christmas comes but once a year, and when the day has passed, the inclination is to go into our shells forgetful of the fact that humanity all about us is full of want, and that these wants can only be relieved by human hands, prompted to service by loving hearts.

There is something about the ocean, with its wide expanse of water, and the waves which lap the shores of two united continents, yet mysteriously held in check by the great forces of nature, which inspires the heart with awe, and we are forced to admit that somewhere, is a God in control.

The giants of the forest, extending their leafy tops far up toward the blue, and reaching down with their tendrils and taking fast hold of the rocks below, excite our admiration, and we reverence the same unseen power.

When the somber gray of winter disappears like magic, and the old earth puts on a mantle of green, and bud and blossom give promise of fruition, and when later the harvest is garnered, if at all appreciative, we recognize the God of the seasons.

The storm, which sweeps across the plain, leaving in its wake a pathway of death and destruction, is an evidence of nature's great forces let loose and a reminder of the fact that no human power can withstand the onslaught.

The realm of nature, in every department, is a realm of mystery, so profound that we accept its mandates without question, and abandon all efforts at solution. The seasons come and go, as if by chance, and the unseen power commands but little thought.

But there is another kingdom which is easy to understand, because it is free from supernatural visitations, and is not clouded with mystery, and that is the kingdom of humanity where we toil and struggle for existence.

Some good people console themselves with the thought that in some mysterious way the God of nature will relieve suffering, care for the sick, and provide for all His needy creatures, but this is simply an excuse for shirking responsibility.

The little boy at the store window would have prayed in vain for the shoes, if some angel with human hands had not happened along and answered his prayer.

The faith of the child was all right, and his mother doubtless told him that God answered his prayer by sending the kind-hearted lady along at just the right time, but there was no mystery in the transaction, because the work of the Master can only be done by human hands.

People sometimes lose their breath and their piety by praying for a lot of things which they don't expect to receive, and which they would not think of asking of any but an invisible God.

If we want the poor helped, it is our business to go out and help them. If a sorrowing heart appeals to us, it is up to us to offer comfort, and so, through all the varied channels of human experience, the work is ours to do, or it will never be done.

There is nothing supernatural about the life we live. It is so intensely real, and so closely environed in human needs, that it appeals to the heart of humanity, and when these appeals are recognized, the Master's mission is being fulfilled.

One of the old orthodox creeds proclaimed the doctrine of "Once in grace always in grace." And so the saving of a soul, and the enrollment of a name on a church record, was the great object to be accomplished.

But life has taken on a broader significance and today the great purpose of the Christian world is to save men and women in the life of the here and now. Not only to save them from sin, but to aid in making the rough pathway of life smoother.

There is something about the sympathy of a human heart, and the touch of a human hand that is tangible, and we are coming to realize, as did the little boy at the window, that the white-winged angels, in common attire, mingle with the throng on all the busy thoroughfares.

Nothing mysterious about it, but a touch of the Divine, which connects the God of nature with the God of grace, and seals the bond of a common brotherhood.

"Why so?"

"Because they work so hard at the polls."

IN QUEST OF ADVENTURE GOES TO PERU TO SLAY THE DEADLY FEVER MOSQUITO

One of the principal streets of Iquitos and Dr. George Marquis Converse.

In search of adventure, Dr. George Marquis Converse, a rich young physician of the Pacific coast, has gone to Peru to spend that country's $2,000,000 appropriation for the sanitation of Iquitos, the new metropolis of the upper-Amazon rubber district. His fellow surgeons in the public health service at Washington say that his chances for coming out alive at the end of his two-year mission are about even. Iquitos is notorious as the deadliest tropical pesthole on earth.

Dr. Converse's job will be to slay the yellow fever mosquito and its cousin the malaria carrying gnat, the housefly that distributes the venom of Asiatic cholera and typhoid, and the rats and ground animals that communicate bubonic plague to men.

Surprising. When some "bugs" stay. A single round. Our wonder is indeed profound.

Needless Alarm. What's that? What's that? Did someone fire? Ah, no. 'Twas just an auto tire.

Poor Reporting. "I don't like the way they reported my speech," complained the new congressman.

"Why, they sprinkled in plenty of laughter and applause."

"Yes; but how about all of them gestures?"

What He Didn't Understand. "Yes," says the cousin from the east, who is being shown over the irrigated ranch, "but there is one thing that puzzles me. How do you get the water away up here?" "We bring it down from the mountain in those flumes," explains the western cousin. "I see all that plainly enough, but how in the dickens do you pump it up to the top of the mountain?"

ROYAL THEATER

Third and Fourth of "Ince Series"

Tonight, "THE ARMY SURGEON"

Kay Bee, 2 Reels

During an Indian uprising, the main body of troops leave the fort in search of the Indians, who elude them. Their renegade leader, finding his squaw is dying, boldly swoops near the fort and demands the services of a doctor. The army surgeon secretly undertakes the dangerous task, not wishing to alarm the women of the post. His rival takes advantage of his absence to create suspicion against him in the mind of the girl they both love. The squaw dies, and in sensational scenes, the doctor escapes, hotly pursued, and finds the soldiers whom he leads back to the fort where the small garrison is battling for life. A thrilling conflict takes place in which the Indians are driven off, and the army surgeon is re-established in the affections of the girl.

Tomorrow, "THE BATTLE OF THE RED MEN."

101 Bison, 2 Reels

One of the old Series. An epic of a struggle between Sioux and Cheyennes.

The Sioux Indians are seen in their village, and the marriage custom is shown as Black Eagle weds Silver Moon. The Cheyennes invade the Sioux hunting grounds and a Cheyenne attacks and slays a bear with a knife to prove his bravery. The party is attacked by the Sioux and war is declared. The Sioux ambush the Cheyennes and a desperate hand-to-hand struggle takes place, in which Black Eagle is killed. Silver Moon is broken with grief, and while seeking the body of her husband is captured by Cheyenne women and made a slave to the chief. The Sioux send Little Wolf to look for her and he manages to crawl into her tepee during the night. Fascinated with her beauty the Cheyenne chief has become infatuated with his slave and burning with hatred for the death of her husband, the Indian woman conceives a plan of revenge. She sends word to the Sioux by Little Wolf that she will lead the Cheyenne chief away and urges them to the battle and with coquettish wiles the pretty Indian woman lures the Cheyenne chief far from the camp. Like a bolt from the clear sky the Sioux hurl themselves upon the Cheyenne village. Without the guidance of their chief the Cheyennes fall easy victims to the Sioux and, but few escape. In a few moments the Cheyenne village is a mass of flames. As the smoke arises to the sky the Cheyenne chief, startled, endeavors to run back, but he is held by Silver Moon, and in a sensational and dramatic scene she pushes him over the cliff.

MAY DELAY FILING RECALL PETITIONS

WERE TO HAVE BEEN HANDED TO CITY CLERK THIS AFTERNOON AS ORIGINALLY PLANNED.

CALL SECOND MEETING

For Next Wednesday When it is Hoped More Business Men May Be Induced to Attend the Gathering at Eagles' Hall.

There has been some delay in filing the recall petitions which were supposed to be ready last Thursday when it was anticipated that they would be placed in the city clerk's hands for confirmation this afternoon. It is thought that the delay is brought about by the fact that the men in charge of the lists desire more time to verify themselves and secure a more representative list of signatures if possible.

Peter Goodman, who apparently is one of the leading spirits in the movement, stated Thursday that the requisite number of signatures had been obtained and that when filed there would be a list of three hundred names held in reserve more than absolutely necessary. At the meeting held Thursday afternoon at Eagles' hall, former Mayor John C. Nichols presided and a committee of ten, a nominating committee it is called was selected. The names of these gentlemen have not been made public as all suggested have not given the consent that their names be used in this connection.

The talk pro and con on the recall proposition is the most interesting subject of conversation throughout the city. The consensus of opinion is that the petition will be filed and that there will be a bitter and merry war over the election of Mayor and two councilmen. Thus far the men most prominently identified with the recall petitions are apparently influenced by either some personal grievance against individual members of the present council, or believe their own personal interests would be best subserved if the recent reform regulations enacted and enforced were done away with.

It is learned that but a small number of the retail liquor men are really active in the work and that some have not only refused to either sign the petitions or have anything to do with the affair. The meeting last Thursday was attended by about a hundred individuals and much enthusiasm was displayed at remarks of the various speakers. One manufacturer expressed his views on the subject favoring the petition because he had lost the service of workmen who refused to live in a city where they could not secure liquor on Sunday. Others told of farmers who brought their wives to the city to do shopping and look them in saloons for a drink of beer, going to other towns because women were not allowed in Janesville saloons.

One great talk of the advocates of the recall appears to be the driving out of the city of the disorderly women and the subsequent loss of trade which some merchants enjoyed from this class of customers. The arguments used to incite the retail liquor dealers to activity appears to be based on the statement that the commission has decided to grant but for fifteen saloons next year instead of fifty-three. This has been asserted would be a loss of revenue to the city and consequently increase taxes. This last argument however was given its death blow when the tax rate for the coming year was made public and it was shown that even with the cutting off of the thirteen licenses, the tax rate per thousand in the city would be less by some five dollars, than in previous years and the city would not undergo any hardships. The other argument, that of reducing the saloons, is not finding many followers among retail liquor men, many of whom state openly there are too many saloons here at it is now and that liquor could go ahead and do business better and have to violate the laws to make both ends meet.

That the question is bound to be far reaching is the interest displayed by many of the women of the city in the question and the open discussion of the topic at various gatherings. If the question comes to a vote it is certain that never in its history will such a large vote have been polled on any question or at any election as will be brought out. Both sides will fight to the bitter end and present indications seem to point to the retention of the present council by a large majority if public opinion shows which way the vote will go.

SENTENCED TO SIXTY DAYS' IMPRISONMENT

John McCloud Consents to Plead "Guilty" of Assaulting George Irwin Last Monday

John McCloud was sentenced to sixty days imprisonment in the county jail by Judge Field in the municipal court this morning, after pleading guilty to making an assault upon George Irwin. McCloud was dismissed from jail last Monday, where he had served a ten day term for conviction of intoxication. He lost no time in getting drunk again and in that condition forced his way into the home of Mr. Irwin, 1041 North Bluff street. Here he asked to see the cows, claiming he was a milk inspector, and on being refused he became abusive and struck Mr. Irwin in the face. McCloud, when arraigned Wednesday morning pleaded "not guilty," but while awaiting his trial in jail changed his mind and decided to plead "guilty." Mr. and Mrs. Irwin are both elderly and in poor health and were not able to appear in court.

OBTAINED IDEAS ON MOTOR FIRE WAGONS IN ROCKFORD

Chief of the Fire Department Klein Pleased With Results Of His Visit There Yesterday Afternoon.

Chief of the Fire Department H. C. Klein reports that he obtained many valuable ideas as to motor-propelled fire apparatus through his visit to Rockford yesterday to witness a test of the new "Continental" motor-fire engine held in that city. The pump on a spurt test threw 870 gallons of water a minute, 170 gallons more than its rated capacity, and developed a pressure of 210 pounds to the square inch. The vehicle weighs about seven tons and negotiated the worst streets and steepest hills in Rockford with no trouble. Fifteen men were carried. Others who witnessed the test are Chief Theissen of the Louisville, Kentucky, fire department, the master mechanic of that fire department's shops, and Chief Rodemeyer of the Preppert fire department. Twenty-five thousand dollars has been appropriated by Freeport for the purchase of motor fire apparatus and the city expects to buy a $11,000 aerial ladder truck, a $9,000 pump, and combined hose and chemical wagon costing $6,500.

GIVE RECEPTION TO METHODIST PASTOR

Pleasant Social Gathering on Occasion of Wedding Anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. Williams.

The parlors of the Carroll Methodist church were filled last evening with a happy company, assembled for the purpose of extending a welcome to the pastor, the Rev. T. D. Williams. The room was beautifully decorated, and in one corner an archway of wedding bells suggested an anniversary, which became a reality when half a dozen bridesmaids, with three little tots acting as flower girls, entered the room, followed by Mr. and Mrs. Williams, who were conducted to the archway, where District Superintendent, Rev. John Reynolds, greeted them, and introduced them to their friends as the bride and groom of twenty-three years ago.

Mr. Reynolds entertained the company by relating pleasant experiences connected with his ministry, and after presenting the bride with a ring, as a token of the renewal of the compact, the curtains behind them were parted, and on a table appeared a set of china dishes, the gift of the people as a token of regard. The completeness of the surprise added to the pleasure of the occasion.

Mr. Williams has recently commenced the fourth year of his pastorate. His untiring work is thoroughly appreciated by the people of his parish, and the church is recognized as one of the forces which make for civic righteousness.

The ladies of the church were mindful of the fact that no social gathering is complete, without something to eat, and so the last act in the little drama was a banquet in the spacious dining room.

BRIDGE SMOKE NUISANCE NOTICEABLY DIMINISHED

Soot No Longer Rains Down From Heating Plant Smokestack in Large Volume—Remedy Defect.

A marked diminution in the volume of black smoke from the central heating plant for the buildings on the Milwaukee street bridge has been noticeable in the last few days. Soot no longer falls like snow on the walks and the clothing of pedestrians who heretofore were tempted to carry an umbrella in self-protection. It is said that the nuisance has been remedied through the discovery and repair of a defective flue. A smoke consumer will soon be installed, if one can be obtained that will work satisfactorily on low pressure steam. There are other chimneys which still continue to be flagrant offenders. It is probable that the smoke ordinance will be enacted by the council will come under the head of "Nuisances." There are a number of factories in the city limits that are large smoke producers but could not be classified as nuisances because they are isolated and it would be unfair to make regulations that would include them. Location as well as the quantity of smoke produced would determine whether the manner of operating a furnace is a nuisance.

RYAN ELECTED NEXT CAPTAIN OF ELEVEN

Fullback on High School Football Team to be Captain in 1913.

Joe Ryan, fullback for the past two years on the local high school eleven, was elected this afternoon to the captaincy of the 1913 team. He is a junior and the honor goes to him, as being a player of credit to the team. This election came after the team assembled together in uniform for the last time this year, to have their picture taken. Ryan is one of the best punters in the history of the school, and his kicking next year will be a feature of the locals, in their attempt to capture the state title which they almost reached this year. The picture was in the form of a group, and seventeen players besides the coach were present. The team will now pack away their moleskins and turn attention to basketball.

DIVORCE QUESTION CAUSE OF CHURCH DISCUSSION

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, Dec. 7.—A clash on the divorce question and criticism of the report of the committee on home life enlivened today's session here of the federal council of the Church of Christ. The council declared that the report was weak and it was referred back to the committee for revisions.

DELIVERY INCREASES THE COST OF LIVING

COULD BE REDUCED TO RETURN TO CUSTOM OF PURCHAS-ING IN PERSON.

SERVICE IS DEMANDED

Public Apparently Would Rather Pay
More Than to Dispense With Accustomed Convenience.

(By Ellis B. Usher.)
Milwaukee, Dec. 7.—The Society of Equity has been in session here this week and one of its projects is co-operative stores, packing houses, etc., to reduce the cost of living. There is no question more under discussion than living costs and it interests everybody and everybody blames everybody else. As in the case of taxes the first impulse seems to be to "get" the other fellow. Nobody seems to be able to do anything. They are all average mind and there is a reason for it. We all bring up our children to be waited upon. It is confined to no class. It is a vice of the poor, the comfortable and the rich alike, except that like all extravagance it binds hardest upon those who have least. We have already got along far enough to have two or more "generations" who do not know how to wait upon themselves. Not many years ago, even the lady who had a carriage and driver did her marketing and took her steak or roast and vegetables home with her. In the smaller cities one rather apologized for asking a market or shop to deliver anything. Somebody, the boy or the girl of the family as likely as anybody, was sent with a market basket if there was no horse in the family and an ample market basket was an adjunct of many family outfits, even in cities. For a great many years the German Market, here in Milwaukee, was the place to meet one's social acquaintances in the morning, and all did their own delivering. Now, as an outgrowth of the demand for service, the woman in a large city who has a charge account at a store, telephones to have a spoon of thread or a paper of pins sent up. She reckons that car fare would cost 8 or 10 cents, and she would lose an hour's time, so in that instance she goes ahead, but this illustrates only one of the many ways that she has become a part of a scheme of life that costs more because people demand more waiting upon. We have large grocery and other establishments in the big cities now that sell for spot cash, and make one or at most two deliveries a day. Orders must be in before 11 o'clock a. m. or the delivery goes over to the next day. These stores sell at lower prices because they spend less for delivering goods. A local paper recently described the system of a big department store. It is interesting to run over a list of the help that serves a customer. Suppose you go for cash. Your purchase and money are sent to the desk, and the inspector sees that your purchase is in accordance with the saleswoman's check, the bundle is wrapped, change is made and it goes back to the clerk who serves you. Four or five people have handled it, and you were, especially on a bargain day, one of hundreds and thousands. If you want your purchased charged and wish to take it with you, it must go to the credit department, to be O. K'd. The inspector must be a swift expert in values or dishonest clerks might connive with outsiders to sell valuable goods for a song, and costly errors would constantly occur. When you come, you want your purchase sent home, by and want the inspector then to wrap it, then boys throw the packages into the chute that takes them to the shipping room. Here is a credit man. He makes a record of the package is made, then to the sorting table where the packages are sorted for the driver, who in turn must sort so his deliveries will come out in order and speed up his route. Then the driver and a helper deliver with a horse and wagon worth $300 to $500, or an automobile worth three or four times that. This is merely suggestive, but it all costs money, and the purchasers of goods pay for it. Once only New York stores patronized by the wealthy gave such service, but the department store discovered that cheaper customers were easily baited with such luxury. It has, also, contributed largely to the opening of charge accounts which the stores like because the average person will buy more if no cash is demanded. I am told that one concern in Milwaukee sends out between 30,000 and 40,000 monthly bills ranging from cents to dollars. That costs money, too. Beside the clerical work and stationary the postage alone is $3600 to $4800 a year. Nobody is to blame for this sort of thing. It is modern, up-to-date business. Nobody would patronize a store that sold cheaper for cash and made no deliveries. The public demands this sort of service and it pays for it. It is a part of the speeded up system of life, and the only thing to do seems to be to use the modern appliances that will increase the value of your time so you can earn enough more to pay for being waited upon. If you are an old fashioned party and don't need all the frills, your wife will need them because she needs the afternoon for the mother's club, or your daughter will need her time for bridge or the "new thought." You cannot hang back in the breeching and hold a 6 cylinder automobile and nobody will wait for you if you insist on going as you can really afford to, on foot.

The thing the day demands is efficiency. The telephone, the automobile, the interurban electric cars, the rural mail delivery all serve the man who harnesses them to his use. Of the farmer who makes slaves. I remember not many years back when the old printer bewailed the linotype because it would put the printer out of business. Instead it increased the newspaper output and employed more men. That is only one instance that came into my own experience. The country is full of them. The newest opportunity for the live member will be offered next month by the parcels post. That will do wonders and the fellow who is awake to its opportunities will see them. Fifteen cents will carry 11 pounds anywhere in the city or suburbs or on a rural mail route that starts in the city. Within 50 miles 35 cents will deliver 11 pounds. I am not going into the details, but the farmer with snap in him, and the rural creamery, and berry man, can furnish city people with poultry, vegetables, eggs, butter, cheese, berries, and what not and cut out the middleman. It will need to be done right, special packages will be required, and it will furnish fresher food, if it is done well, and the farmer can get cash, monthly, and realize more for his produce. But he can't do it and be slovenly. One bad egg will do him with a customer. People are plenty who are willing to pay for service, but they will demand what they pay for, as they should.

A Telephone Advertisement.
Every such new service demands the help of the telephone, and like the other new helpmates of society, the telephone adds to the cost of living unless it is used to save time and acquire burdens. People are learning to do that. The increase lies in the growth of the Bell System, the only comprehensive telephone system in the land and it is shown right here in Wisconsin.

Six years ago the Wisconsin Telephone Co. had an investment of $7,000,000. By January 1st it will be $14,000,000 and the appropriation of 1913 will add $1,600,000 more. The company will build nearly 6000 miles of new wire service, half of it for toll business. It will use 16,000 poles, enough to carry a line twice across the state. The man who spends all this money is Plant Superintendent Killam, who started with the Bell System 16 years ago, a kid, carrying around batteries in Boston. He came to Wisconsin in 1905 and is a good result of the Bell's excellent civil service system of promotions.

An interesting suggestion comes over the wires that the Canadian Pacific road is thought to be negotiating for the purchase of the Michigan Central road to secure an entrance to Chicago from the east. The possibility is also suggested that the ownership of both the New York Central and the Michigan Southern, may come under the ban of the recent decision of the supreme court as to the Harriman system, and lead an inducement to the Vanderbilts to sell to the Canadians. Such a purchase would give the Canadian road a connection with Buffalo that would be a long step toward an eastern trunk line. Wisconsin would get close connection with that sort of a deal through the Wisconsin Central division of the "Sooy." Wisconsin is "on the way" between the east and the great northwest and its manufacturing growth shows that people are finding it out. Milwaukee is developing tremendously, and only now and then a man outside the traffic business seems to know that iron and steel and their by-products and secondary manufactures are the city's great industries. They'll aggregate $100,000,000 or more this year, or nearly a third of the city's manufacturing output.

An Erie Freight Advertisement.
This makes me think of a feature of the Erie Railroad Transit Company's business that I overlooked last week, and which is of large importance to many people out in the state as well as here. The Erie's fleet of big boats all touch at Cleveland on their west bound way, on purpose to give Milwaukee the benefit of the water route on the heavy iron and steel tonnage that comes from there. This isn't philanthropy. It is just good business and shows that the Erie boats are not only accommodating customers, to build up their own trade, but that their freight men have the nose for business.

It is worth one's while, occasionally, in the rush of things that press for attention, to remember a friend that has gone. I lost one the other day. One of long standing, for which I entertained a high respect, and I don't want to speak of him lugubriously. He wasn't of that type. When I first knew P. J. Smalley he was practicing law and editing a little paper in the small city of Caledonia, Minn. I was in La Crosse and it was his newspaper that I first saw. It said things and it said them with the weight and purpose of an earnest, sincere man. He followed his real bent toward news-gathering work. He belonged to the Smalley stock that has furnished conspicuous names in newspaper history, and edited the St. Paul Globe and other papers, always in the same spirit that guided his steady pen in the Caledonia Argus. Since his death I see that a lot of young men sing his praises for the help he gave them. I was so young but I always felt sure of him as a staunch ally, if I deserved one, and I know what these boys mean. He was a large man in all the things that count most for manliness and I am glad to know that the young men realized it. That is a most worthy monument for him. He was a dead weight to Wisconsin honor.

Short Notes.
Milwaukee had Grand Opera and the Charity Ball this week and next week. David Warfield, who is one of the best men on the stage will play "The Return of Peter Grim," at the Davidson, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The play is Belasco's and it depicts with his master touch, the debatable land between life and the spirit world and makes a beautiful play of it.

Twenty-five railroad bonds were down last week at the lowest point since the panic of 1907.

The foreign trade of the country will, this year, exceed all records, and will probably touch four billions.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

THE BYPRODUCT.
The best things of life come incidentally.

They are byproducts.
Before you have gained wisdom in experience you fancy the battle of life is easiest to win by frontal attack and you smash away at it. Later on you come to see that a flank movement is best.

That is to say:
You try to do something by direct effort and fail. Then you turn your attention to something else, and, lo, you find that which you sought at first. For instance:

You want to be happy. You try to make yourself happy. You try hard and fail. Then you quit trying and conclude that happiness is not won in that way. You conclude that it is best to make others happy. You try that and the first thing you know you are happy.

It is the byproduct.
In looking for something else what you want turns up. You have won by the flank movement.

There's popularity.
You want to be popular and you try to be. But somehow your smiles do not win. Somehow people come to see that you are working at the popularity business. You fail. Then you conclude it is better to deserve popularity than to win it; that it is better to try to be lovable than to be lovely. Then you are popular.

A woman wants to be beautiful. She follows the directions of the experts of the Sunday papers, haunts the beauty parlors, uses face creams and cosmetics—and fails. She concludes it is better to have good health and a beautiful soul. She perseveres and—She is beautiful.

It may be so even in making money. You try to get rich quick. You fail. Then you conclude you are not cut out for a millionaire. You decide to go slowly and safely and be content. And the money comes.

It is so of fame. He who sets out to be famous and thinks only of fame is apt to fail. When he reorganizes his life and concludes that it is better to deserve fame than to acquire it he is going rightly about the matter. When he merits his fame he gets it. It is the byproduct.
We are built that way.

HURT WHEN PINNED AGAINST SHREDDER

Frank Jones Residing South of Afton
Suffers Fractured Hip in Accident Yesterday.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Afton, Dec. 7.—Frank Jones who resides two miles south of this village on the Afton road, suffered serious injuries late yesterday while shredding corn on the farm just purchased by Paul Gaske, two miles north of Beloit. Mr. Jones was feeding into the machine when a team which was being driven up to the feeder became frightened and started to run. He made an effort to catch them but was in some manner pinned between the load of corn and the side of the shredder. The team, finding their load would not move, became more excited and jerked and pulled until they broke away. Mr. Jones was unable to move and had to wait until the load of corn could be tipped over before rescued from his painful position. Dr. Paul Fox of Beloit was called and upon examination it was found that he had suffered a fractured hip in addition to bruises and scratches. He will be confined to his bed for four or five weeks. He is about 45 years of age and has a family.

LORD LANSLOWNE IS SLATED FOR LEADER OF UNIONIST PARTY

Favored Over Bonar Law For Position—Lansdowne Chosen to Make Announcements of Policy.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Dec. 7.—At the autumn conference of the National Unionist Association, when the platform of the Unionist party was confirmed, it was made very clear that should there be a change of government in the United Kingdom, the task of forming the cabinet would fall upon the shoulders of Lord Lansdowne and not upon Bonar Law.

During the past few months, as all the fighting has been in the House of Commons, and attention has been attracted to that house more than to the House of Lords, Unionists as well as Liberals have come to regard Bonar Law as actually, if not technically, leader of his party, as well as that part of it which sits in the House of Lords. At the conference, however, it was Lord Lansdowne, not Mr. Law, who was chosen to make the important announcements in regard to the policy of the party. A duty which invariably falls upon the leader of the party. Mr. Law, it will be remembered, was chosen leader of the Unionists in the Commons when Mr. Balfour retired, but, unlike his predecessor, Mr. Law was not chosen leader of the party. In the American sense he is simply floor leader in the Lower House, and he obtained that position because the Conservative and Liberal-Unionist elements of what is now known officially as the Unionist party could not compose their differences and elect either of their leaders, Austen Chamberlain or Walter Long to the place. Bonar Law has not been a great success as a leader, and therefore the action of the National Convention in making clear that he was not the leader of the party in the country. Mr. Law's direct manner pleases and arouses the younger element in his party. The great bulk of the older Conservatives, however, prefer the quiet style of which Mr. Balfour was the exemplar, and while they do not openly oppose, they privately object to the somewhat exaggerated views expressed by Mr. Law on what will happen in Ulster if Home Rule is passed; for example, or if his support of the noisy inter-rupters in parliament, who the other evening pelted the prime minister with paper and in other ways, acted in a manner unbecoming members of parliament.

The assumption by Lord Lansdowne of the leadership of the party also indicates that his health, which last summer it was feared had broken down, has since greatly improved. It was also rather marked that at the convention no mention was made of the referendum that was to precede the introduction of tariff reform, or tariff for revenue only, should the Unionists be returned. During the last election Mr. Balfour, who is not a very ardent tariff reformer, was induced, by what is known as the advisory committee of the party, consisting of three London editors, to say that should the Unionists succeed in the election the question of tariff reform would be referred to a vote of the people. Bonar Law, who at the time was running for a Manchester constituency, where tariff reform is not popular, and generally all the leaders and active members of the party, took up the idea and in this way brought many Unionist free traders back into the fold. Joseph Chamberlain, the chief apostle of tariff reform, and his son, Austen Chamberlain, were the only prominent Unionists who repudiated the idea of a referendum, and declared, so far as their influence went, the return of the Unionists would mean the immediate introduction of a measure embodying the policy for which they had fought. Now the party in convention has adopted their view of the matter.

The other planks of the party platform were thus outlined by Lord Lansdowne:

"Restoration of the British Constitution, by which he meant the repeal of the Parliament Act, which deprived the lords of their power of veto and the substitution of a measure reforming the Upper House."

"The maintenance of the Union with Ireland, coupled with the continuation of a generous policy to Ireland so long as she remains part and parcel of us."

"The efficiency of national finance." "A land policy not based on class hatred. We desire the cultivation of the land to better the lot of those who cultivate it, notably by increasing the number of those interested in it as owners of the soil."

NOT MUCH INTEREST IN FRENCH ELECTION

No Campaign in American Sense—President Chosen by National Assembly—Deschanel Candidate.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, Dec. 7.—It is the eve of a presidential election in France and yet one seldom hears the fact mentioned unless he frequents the lobbies of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies. Even in the halls of legislation there is nothing like the intense interest to be found in every hamlet of the United States preceding the choice of a chief magistrate. This is due largely to the fact that the president is chosen not by popular vote, but by the National Assembly, and that his powers, though large, are by no means so great as those of the president of the United States, while his influence on legislation and on public opinion generally is much less.

There is no campaign in the American sense, no primaries, no platforms and no popular discussions. The wish of the people so far as it finds occasional expression is that the president shall be a safe man, without daring ambition or a liking for the dramatic and adventurous. France treats its president fairly well. His residence in Paris is the Elysee Palace and in the country the beautiful chateau of Rambouillet. He receives a salary of $120,000 a year,

Edgerton, Dec. 7.—The girls of the high school held their leap year party in Academy hall last evening. There were about seventy-five couples present, and all enjoyed a good time. Merrill's orchestra furnished the music for the entertainment.

Miss Ada Thompson of Stoughton attended the leap year party last night.

and in addition an equal sum is allowed him for expenses of entertaining. He assumes office a month after his election.

The members of the Senate and of the Chamber of Deputies, meeting together as the National Assembly at Versailles on January 17, will choose a successor to President Fallieres. The foremost candidate is Paul Deschanel, president of the Chamber and one of its bright lights for twenty-eight years. He is 55 years of age, and his family has great wealth. In a sense, the leader of each political group is a candidate, though neither party lines nor combinations or factions determine the choice. A notable candidate from the Senate is Alexandre Ribot, three times premier and a man held in high esteem. His wife was Miss Mary Burch of Chicago, and she has assisted him much in his public career. M. Ribot is nearly 71. Other candidates are the president of the Senate, M. Dubost, Leon Bourgeois, M. Delcasse, Premier Poincare and Gaston Doumergue. The latter's program is to save France from materialism and commercialism.

M. Fallieres, in preparing for his retirement, has engaged an apartment near the American Embassy. He will devote his time between Paris and his little vineyard at Loupillon in southern France, where he produces 600 cases of wine yearly.

A SONG OF THE G. A. R.

At nearly every gathering of the veterans of the Civil War, and especially at their campfire meetings, one of their favorite diversions is singing or hearing someone sing some of the songs that through association are endeared to them for one reason or another. Many of these are the old battle songs, some of the songs that were written and sung during the stormy days of the Rebellion and the list includes "Marching Through Georgia," "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," and a number of others equally well known.

At the time of the last national convention of the G. A. R. held in Los Angeles in September, there was sung a new song, written by one of the old soldiers, which is becoming a favorite with G. A. R. men all over the country. The song is called "The Little Bronze Button," referring to the emblem of the order worn by all its members. Its author is John L. Parker, past department commander of Massachusetts, who composed the words to be sung to the tune of "The Old Camp Ground." A copy of the song was sent to Captain Elmy Norcross, a prominent G. A. R. man of this city and a well known resident here, who is now spending the winter at Orlando, Fla. A copy was forwarded by Mr. Norcross to a comrade, L. M. Nelson of this city, with instructions to have a number of copies printed at his expense and distributed among the old soldiers here. This has been done and at Captain Norcross' request, the song is published in the Gazette, in order that other veterans residing in the county may get copies of it. The song is as follows:

THE LITTLE BRONZE BUTTON.
How dear to the heart of each gray-headed soldier
Are thoughts of the days we still wore the blue;
While memory recalls every trial and danger,
And scenes of the past are brought to his view.

Though long since discarding our arms and equipments
There's one thing a soldier most surely will note—
The first thing he sees on the form of a comrade
Is the little "bronze button" he wears on his coat.

Chorus.
The little brown button,
The sacred bronze button;
The Grand Army button
He wears on his coat.

"How much did it cost," said a man to the soldier,
"That little, flat button you wear on your coat?"
"Ten cents in good money," he answered the stranger,
"And four years of marching and fighting to boot."

The wealth of the world cannot purchase this emblem,
Except that the buyer once wore the brave blue;
And it shows to mankind the full marks of a hero—
A man who to honor and country was true.

Chorus.
The little brown button, etc.
Then let us be proud of the little bronze button!
And wear it with spirit, both loyal and bold;
Fraternal welcome each one who supports it
With love in our hearts for the comrades of old.

Each day musters out whole battalions of weavers;
And soon will be missed the loved token so dear;
But millions to come will remember, with honor,
The men who'd the right that bronze button to wear.

Chorus.
The little brown button, etc.

The force under the civil service has been developed into three groups with salary grades for each.

ATTORNEY GIBSON FIGHTS FOR LIFE

Burton W. Gibson.

Burton W. Gibson, New York lawyer charged with having strangled to death Mrs. Saxon, his client, hoped to convince the jury that the dead woman was drowned as the result of an accident while the two were out boat riding. His attorneys contend that the peculiar condition of the throat noted at autopsy could have been caused by the undertaker who prepared the body.

Christmas celebration is world wide. The day is celebrated in many tongues in various ways but always the idea of mirth and happiness is accentuated. The same hearty good wishes are echoed all over the world in different ways. The custom of forgetting oneself and making merry with others and for others is a wise and wholesome one.

At Christmas time the days begin to lengthen and the sun's rays glow on the earth for a longer period. Let us take a hint from this, and on Christmas day let there be light in our hearts—light of Unselfishness, Comradeship, Sympathy, Helpfulness, Tenderness and Friendliness for others.

No one can enjoy Christmas day alone. You can only have a Merry Christmas if others are merry with you.

For once, don't think of what the world owes you but of your debt to the world, and how it is in your power to lighten the burden of others. Give your generous impulses full sway on this day.

Don't let Christmas degenerate into a mere commercial give and take holiday, but help to make it a time of joyous pleasure for countless thousands.

The True Christmas Spirit

Take an unselfish interest in the happiness of others and greet Christmas day with a feeling of good fellowship toward the rest of humanity.

Money is not good will, but good fellowship is.

Have a feeling of good fellowship for those less fortunate than yourself.

Have a feeling of good fellowship for your equals.

Have a feeling of good fellowship for your superiors.

Have a feeling of good fellowship for the young and for the aged.

Let your heart throb with a feeling of fellowship toward some poor neglected family. Be a modern Santa Claus to them, and you will be twice blessed in the giving and in the receiving.

The hope and cheer that you will bring into their lives will tend to make your own day the happier.

If you greet this Christmas day with the feeling of good fellowship and comradeship for others, you will find life truly worth living; you will be inspired by the true Christmas spirit.

Then we need not wish you a Merry Christmas, for a Merry Christmas full of hope and joy will surely be yours.

Copyright 1912, by I. J. Robinson

THE glimmer and sparkle of the Christmas season is upon us. How cheerful the wreaths look in the windows, and what fun and excitement there is in preparing for the blithesome, merry Christmas day. Who doesn't believe in Santa Claus at this season of the year? Though Santa Claus may come in an automobile or an airship, though he may find steam radiators instead of chimneys, and the tree may be illuminated with electric lights instead of ablaze with candles, still he is welcomed just as hilariously and with the same enthusiasm as when he arrived in his sleigh driven by his sturdy reindeer.

Enter into the spirit of the festival with the enthusiasm of youth. Try to have each succeeding Christmas, even more than the previous one, emphasize the gladness of the day.

Christmas should be a home day in which old and young participate alike. Decorate the house with garlands of evergreen and holly; use an abundance of the vivid scarlet berries and the Christmas flower, the poinsettia. Have the rooms a mass of color and flame. With a little ingenuity and originality one can evolve many splendid attractive color schemes.

One novel decorative idea in which the boys and girls can assist is to make the room look like fairyland with flowers and real branches. Have the children gather great bunches of branches and trees. Then they can be kept busy cutting cherry blossoms or any simple flower out of crepe paper. The twigs can be quickly inserted through the center of the petals, or the flower can be pasted onto the branch. Have some blossoms separate and some in clusters. Put huge bunches of the branches in every conceivable spot—above the picture frames, on the hearth, in vases on the table, and wherever you can find space for them.

Some of the blossoms can be strung onto strings and draped from the chandelier to the corners of the room. Pretty hanging curtains of the flowers can drape the windows and doors. You will be amply repaid for your labor when your task is completed.

CHRISTMAS TREES.

What is Christmas without a Christmas tree? The climax of the day comes when the tree is lighted and viewed in all its glory. A tree that is hung entirely with silver tinsel and light glass balls, is like a shower of silver rain. The presents are attached to this tree with clothes pins covered with silver foil.

The gifts are wrapped in silver paper. Silver bells tinkle from the branches and silver stars of pasteboard covered with silver paper are attached with wires to the top of the tree.

Another tree is festooned with birds and butterflies in a multitude of colors. The butterflies are of spun glass, while the birds are of celluloid. The tree can stand in a waste paper basket or an immense flower pot. A heavy weight should be placed at the bottom to steady the tree and the tree should be tied on with a stout cord. Pack the basket with moss or green tissue paper.

A tree that is decorated at an expense of less than two dollars is trimmed with articles that can be made at home. Hang chains on the boughs made of strips of red and green paper pasted to form rings. One link is slipped through the other until you have chains the desired length. Popcorn wreaths are very effective. Sew each popcorn separately with coarse white thread on white hat wire and form into circles. A yard of tulle will make about twelve bags. Fill the bags with goodies and sew together with coarse, worsted. Tartan mittens, stockings, and pitchers can be filled with nuts, raisins, candies and eggs. Clusters of gilded nuts are suspended from the branches with gold string. The nuts can be glued together. In some of the nuts have little surprises; a bright new coin, a trinket or any small trifle. Pasteboard trumpets are made of a horn of cardboard covered with green or red paper. Glue a circular piece of cardboard to the lower end of the horn and fill the horn with some little souvenir.

Home made drums, cornucopias, in a variety of pretty designs, are made of cardboard covered with paper; transfer pictures such as the children use, can be used to decorate the outer covering. The boys will like theirs the better if they contain marbles, and the girls if theirs are heaped with jacks or some doll's furniture.

Santa Claus should be at the top-most branch of the tree. Dress a doll in red crepe paper. Trim the suit in cotton batting with small pieces of coal for buttons. His hat can be made of black mat board, and his hair and flowing beard of white cotton.

THE CHRISTMAS TABLE.

Christmas spells hospitality, and the Christmas dinner will be all the more enjoyed by the family and guests if there is something about it to distinguish it from other days. Plan a table that is unique in its decorations and that will draw forth expressions of surprise and exclamations of admiration when it is seen bedecked in all its holiday glory.

A table that is typical of the day and that will stand out in the minds of your guests has for a centerpiece the bright poinsettias. Cover a milk pan with scarlet paper, tie a big flaring bow around the center, fill the pan with either real or paper poinsettias. From the center of the flowers draw red ribbons to each plate. Have the ice cups and place cards decorated with the same flower. A table cloth of paper in poinsettia design is effective.

The candle shades are ornamented with small poinsettias and a big bunch is suspended from the chandelier.

A table for the children could have for a centerpiece a small house made of cardboard with a snowy roof of cotton. Cut Santa Claus and his sleigh drawn by six reindeer out of red and black cardboard. Suspend this with wires above the house. Have a bank of cotton around the house. In the cotton have sprigs of evergreen. The bon bons are in little sleighs of cardboard, drawn by a pair of reindeer. For the place cards draw a four-inch snow man on a white card, including plug hat, and cover all in white crepe paper, except his hat which is black. Mark face in ink. Paste snow man on card 5x1½ inches. Put small strip of cardboard on back for stand.

For the salted almonds use little baskets of crepe paper with wire handles. Cover with paper and have a sprig of holly on the handle. A snow man in front of each place, is of paper stuffed with cotton. He holds a branch in his hand of holly, and wears a black cardboard hat. His face is marked in ink. Snowballs of cotton dusted in mica could be scattered over the table.

Surprise Her With This Xmas Package

TO see it under the Xmas tree, no one would ever guess that it contained a Caloric Fireless Cookstove, fully equipped and ready to use is to ordinary "cookers" what a Tiffany ring is to ordinary rings. Back of the name Caloric stands perfect reliability. That is why the Caloric should be your Christmas gift. It is the perfect cookstove.

The Caloric Fireless Cookstove

The Caloric will roast a turkey that will melt in your mouth. The meat will be tender, yet firm, and pie crust will be browned to a delightful golden hue. The DRY OVEN is the reason.

The Caloric gets a dry oven by means of a STEAM VALVE. No other fireless has this valve. It is an exclusive Caloric patent. It permits the excess of steam to escape while retaining all necessary heat.

The Seamless Aluminum Lining

is the very latest improvement to guarantee the usefulness and durability of the Caloric. We now have three kinds of oven linings, you may have your choice of seamless aluminum, white, porcelain enamel, or terneplate. But the point to remember is that there are no seams inside the aluminum oven to be opened by the heat and thus let in moisture to spoil the insulation. No other fireless cooker has a seamless oven. Seamless aluminum is practically everlasting.

Cooks Everything

That is another secret of Caloric success. Almost any good cooker can prepare some kinds of food and even a cheap cooker will last a year. But the Caloric cooks all foods from the raw state. Its perfect insulation gives an oven temperature of 400 degrees. So that you can bake, roast, boil, stew, steam—in fact, prepare food in any manner you desire and cook any kind of food.

FREE, with every Caloric cookstove a complete aluminum cooking set and a cloth bound cookbook containing over 300 Caloric recipes.

Jane's Happiest Christmas

Copyright 1912, by I. J. Robinson.

It was late in the afternoon of the day before Christmas. The library, reading room was almost deserted. Jane had replaced the last popular fiction books that had accumulated on the librarian's desk, had put away the stray magazines that had been left on the tables, adjusted her date stamp and stood looking out of the window before venturing out into the steady pour of drizzling rain.

Finally hurrying into the busy street she mused: "It certainly is hard enough to be immersed in the worst case of blues that was ever known on sea or land on a Christmas evening, without having the elements to contend with besides. Although for weeks I've been dreading this Christmas day, I had firmly made up my mind to keep up my courage and not indulge in self pity, but here I am at the first sign of twilight all ready for a good old-fashioned cry. These holidays are all right for happy people, but they were never meant for depressed spirits. If I had the remodeling of this world, my first official act would be to abolish the holiday season."

As Jane trudged along in the rain a great gust of wind blew off her hat. She ran, but before she was able to reach it a man caught it and, handing it to her, exclaimed in surprise:

"Of all things! It isn't Jane! That little bennet seemed to have a sort of well-known individuality about it when I saved it for you from a watery grave."

"It's a hat; it isn't a bonnet," laughed Jane. "But I'm so glad to see you that if we weren't on the public street, and if I hadn't been bridesmaid for your wife, and if my arms weren't otherwise occupied, I would hug you this minute."

"It is ages since we've heard of or seen you. Where have you been hiding, little cousin, and how are you?" enquired Kurt.

"Oh, I'm—I'm—just splendid," answered Jane brightly, though her eyes filled with sudden tears at sight of the familiar face.

"Well, you don't look it, that's sure," said Kurt in his brusque way. Then, taking out his watch, he went on: "Now look here, I have a little Christmas shopping to finish up for the youngster's tree. My train leaves in just one hour and twenty-five minutes. You run on to your boarding house, dump a few things in a suit case and meet me at the station. My wife and the kiddies will never forgive me if I don't bring you home with me."

"You're a dear," replied Jane, "but I could never, never come. You see, since my husband and I have separated I'm in no spirits to lend happiness to any family celebration, and I would only cast a damper on you all."

"Perfect nonsense," exclaimed Kurt. "I won't listen to any 'buts.' It is plainly evident that you are needing a good dose of cheering up, and it is just fate or good fortune or something that I happened to be the one to pick-up your wind-tossed bonnet, or hat, or whatever it may be. Don't talk any more about it, but meet me at the station. Good by."

Before Jane could realize it she was seated in the express train on her way to her cousin's suburban home.

The car was filled with the Christmas shoppers. Dignified men, who, as a rule, refused to carry even a 2x4 package, were loaded down with mysterious-looking bundles of all sizes and descriptions. Holly and mistletoe were in evidence everywhere.

"So you are not happy, Jane," said Kurt, as he looked down at the pathetic little person beside him. "I feared you would regret separating from Stanton."

"Oh, I do, Kurt—if you only knew how much! It is four months since we agreed to part and since that time I see things in a clearer and truer light. I was just a foolish, jealous little scatterbrain then, and now I am a woman. I realize, when it is too late, that I love him more than I ever did."

"Why don't you tell him so, then," asked Kurt. "He no longer cares for me. Not once has he made an attempt to communicate with me since we parted. I don't even know where he lives."

"But Stanton was always of a proud nature, and when you absolutely refused after your separation to accept even a small allowance from him, and insisted upon resuming your library position, I judge he was deeply hurt. But cheer up, little woman, somehow I have a feeling, as Auntie Dempster used to say, that before many moons you will be reunited and happier than before this unfortunate affair."

"You are such a comfortable cousin," sighed Jane. "Whenever I see you I feel like dumping all my troubles right off on your broad shoulders. You have a regular big brother air about you."

On their arrival, Sue and the children devoured Jane with kisses and Sue, laughingly remarked: "Bringing Jane home with you tonight, Kurt, is the first sensible thing you've done in a long while."

The happy home circle, the congenial parents, the joyous children frolicking around the resplendent Christmas tree, brought vividly to Jane's mind the contrast between her friend's life and her own lot. Unable to hide the tears that would come, on a pretext of seeking a book, she hastened to her room to gain her composure.

Entering her room, she found the maid uncovering her bed and she noticed through the mirror of her dressing table how keenly she eyed her. Presently she was surprised to hear the girl burst out with:

"And you are Mr. Davenport's wife, aren't you?"

"Why, yes," answered Jane, turning quickly and staring at her. "Evidently you are acquainted with him."

"Well, I was after thinking I recognized you from the picture on his dresser. Shure, I know him, and a finer man never walked on two legs. I was the housekeeper at his bachelor apartment until a fortnight since and then I took this place.

My husband is chauffeur here and we believe that man and wife shouldn't be separated," she said, with knowing emphasis.

"So Stanton has my photograph on his dresser," murmured Jane.

"He has that," went on the loquacious Nora. "I guess I ought to know, because I dusted it every morning. But it didn't need much dusting, you would be thinking, if you saw how much he handled it."

"Oh, Nora, does he really—really—really?" cried Jane, clasping her hands, her heart beating fast.

"Poor man," continued Nora, "he was so sad and lonesome like one morning I said to him, said I:

"I'll be so bold to tell you, sir, I'm sorry for you, sir," and he answered, "Thank you, you are a faithful girl. I wonder if you know how fortunate you are, that you love your husband. I would give everything I own in this world if I thought my wife loved me."

"His wife does love him, Nora; she just loves him to death," exclaimed Jane, almost shaking the girl in her delight. "Tell me his address, quick."

Jane rushed to the telephone, and in a few minutes was talking to Stanton over the long distance phone.

"Will you spend Christmas with me? I am at Kurt's, and I need you so much," she said.

"Will I come?" he answered. "Just as soon as the fast express can take me. Only God knows how I long for you, girl."

"Holidays are good institutions, after all," said Jane to herself as she hung up the receiver, "and I am sure my Christmas this year is going to be the happiest one in all the world."

WATCHES

There are some things about them that are VERY IMPORTANT. The variation caused by heat and cold is one of the most important. This is one cause why you cannot get your watch to keep good time.

Another is position and isochronal errors. These errors can only be corrected by a man who has put in years of hard study and been trained by a master of the art. American watches that have been thus corrected, cost about $20.00 to $75.00 for the movements alone.

Being a master of the art of watch making, and wishing to give you the best time your money will buy, I have a limited number of seven, fifteen and seventeen jeweled watches that are adjusted for heat and cold, two to five position and isochronism, the sizes most appreciated by the ladies and gentlemen and backed by a absolute unconditional guarantee, to give you the right service, that I am going to sell this year at prices that have never been equalled before by anyone. Here is an example, 12s 7 jewel movement, three adjustments, fitted in open face, dust proof, case guaranteed for twenty years for only $11.00.

NOVEL XMAS IDEAS

Copyright 1912, by I. J. Robinson.

No matter how simple or inexpensive the gift, if it has the individual touch and is the product of one's handiwork, its value is enhanced a hundredfold. Appropriateness is a great factor. Be sure that the gift answers some need; in other words, that it is the right gift for the right person.

Remember Christmas comes but once a year, and put a little extra care and thought to the wrappings of the parcels and packages. Be lavish in the use of Yule-Tide colors—scarlet and green—and tuck little sprays of holly or mistletoe amongst the soft tissue paper coverings to help make the Christmas present look Christmasy.

An appropriate jingle or happy original thought accompanying the token will add to its significance. Above all, endeavor to have your presents reach their destination in time, even if they have to be completed in a hurry and hurry. Better a day too soon than a day too late. Here is a bewildering array of gifts that can easily be made by dolt fingers. Some of these articles may help solve the ever perplexing problem of "What shall I give?"

A dainty remembrance which the recipient is sure to appreciate is a sachet pad for the bottom of the bureau drawer. An inner pad is made of wadding dusted with a fragrant sachet powder, and this pad is covered either with some pretty cretonne or soft silk. Tuck the sachet at intervals with bows of baby ribbon.

For one who prefers a useful rather than an ornamental gift, a set of dress protectors will, I am sure, be received with keen expressions of delight. They can be made of silkolene at a trifling cost. Make a bag a yard and a half in length, the width of the goods. An opening should be left at the top for the hanger. Have it open half way down the front with buttons and button holes.

Another useful article is a waist cover made of a square of dimity or organdie, edged with a fancy stitch in mercerized cotton. A small circle should be cut in the center for the hanger to go through.

Fashion's latest decree is seen in the new black satin Robes-pierres collars with jabots of filmy shadow lace. A charming neck adornment is fashioned of a yard of narrow velvet ribbon tied into a bow with the ends longer than the loops. Tiny roses made of number two folded satin ribbon, with leaves of shirred green ribbon, decorate the ends and knot.

If one knows how to crochet, there is an endless selection of different novelties. Metal collar pins can be covered with single crochet, also hat pins, buckles and picture frames. A lovely card case is formed of two square medallions lined in satin and finished with a narrow edge. Crochet dollies for the dining table are again coming in vogue. Any housekeeper would highly prize a set in varying sizes in heavy thread. Then there are numerous ideas for mufflers, neckties, round pin cushions and bags, corset bags, shopping bags, handkerchief bags and bags of all sorts and sizes. Mercerized cotton slippers with quilted satin soles would be a thoughtful gift for an invalid.

Boudoir caps are seen here, there and everywhere, and by some are considered a necessity instead of a luxury. Why not have one all of insertions of ribbon and lace of equal width. Run an elastic around the edge and have a frilly, fluffy ruffle of lace around the crown. A few rosebuds scattered among the ruffles will add to the effect.

Corsage and buttonhole bouquets of old-fashioned flowers are most alluring. Many varieties and designs may be devised. Wrap the stems in silver foil and tie with Swiftest of Birds.

The swallow is the speed king of the air, with a record of 300 feet a second.

gauze ribbon of a harmonizing shade. Only upon close inspection can they be detected from nature's own blossoms.

Underwear straps would be a thoughtful gift for the college girl. These are cleverly constructed out of two inch satin ribbon shirred on elastic. Pert little bows hide the patent fastenings.

Little sister never can possess too many hair bows. Buttonhole the end of a yard of ribbon of her favorite shade and tie into a jaunty bow. Of course, if your purse allows, a sash to match would be a welcome addition.

In the wintry days a crocheted cap of heavy wool with a neck piece of the same color, trimmed with saucy bows of ribbon, would keep her good and warm.

Perhaps, however, sister would prefer a new frock for her dolly, in the very latest style, made out of pieces always to be found in the scrap bag.

Brother could use a necktie case. Cover two pieces of cardboard with wadding and silk or any pretty material. Punch holes in the back and draw ribbon through so that the four inches.

School pennants and pillows are two parts can be separated about also attractive made in school colors.

For the man who shaves himself, I am sure a razor case would be very suitable. A serviceable case is made of coarse weave linen. Embroider the monogram on the flap in some bright color. You will require one-half yard of material eighteen inches wide. Fold together, leaving the lower folded piece as long again as the upper. Divide into spaces about an inch and a half wide. Catch stitch between. For traveling, the longer piece can be used as a flap. Silk cord is utilized so that it can be hung on the wall.

Another masculine convenience is a pair of laundry bags of khaki or brown holland linen, one bag for use while the other is at the laundry. Run a hoop through the top and complete with a two-inch heading. Embroider the name in full in small letters on each bag.

Don't you think grandmother would be pleased with boxes neatly covered in cretonne, a box for her writing materials, one for trinkets, another for handkerchiefs and a fourth for her comb and brush?

An apron is an acceptable gift. A favorite apron for the dear old lady is of white dimity with lavender flowers. Turn back about six inches so as to form a pocket, and divide the pocket into three sections. Scallop the apron in lavender silk and have the ties of lavender ribbon.

A practical pin case is of a piece of eiderdown 15 inches long and 3 inches in width, faced with ribbon. Cross or feather stitch the two together. In the eiderdown place row after row of black and white pins, and safety pins in assorted sizes. When completed, roll and close with silk loop and small pearl button.

For His Royal Highness, the baby, there are the cutest armlets in either pink or blue. Narrow hat elastic is edged on both sides with a double row of silk in a simple shell stitch. Little pompons of ribbon trim the armlets.

Of a fine embroidered handkerchief baby can have a Dutch bonnet. Turn one side back about one-third, shape to the head with tiny plaits, and on each side place ribbon rosettes.

Baby always enjoys a horse rein. Give him a strong durable one of pink and white wash belting, with shoulder straps. Jangling bells across the front will add to the child's pleasure.

A square of white net edged with beading and lace makes a nice carriage veil.

Bootees can be made of pique or fannel, bound in pink, and laced up the front with silk cord.

These suggestions may assist you in your holiday preparations. At all events, if your presents have been sown with thoughts of friendliness and love they are sure to be received in the same spirit as they are given. The heart of the giver always makes the gift trebly dear and precious.

GAMES for CHRISTMAS PLAY

Copyright 1912, by I. J. Robinson

HERE are some jolly, rollicking games for the youngsters. It would be a good idea for the grown folks to forget their dignity on this gladsome day, and join in frolics. It will add to the children's fun, and the grown-ups will surely be none the worse for the wear.

1. Sculptor. A child chosen as sculptor arranges the players in different positions as statues. She says: "The sculptor will not be at home today," and leaves the room. The statues, on being left alone, dance around and have a good time, but on her return, when she cries: "The sculptor returns! One, two, three!" before she says "three" all must try to regain their proper positions. The last player in position becomes the sculptor.

2. Floating a feather. It is great fun to form a circle and try to keep a downy feather from sinking to the floor by blowing at it. The circle must not be broken.

3. French Blind Man's Buff. This game causes much merriment. A child is blindfolded, furnished with a cane, and is placed in the center of a circle. The players circle around him until he gives a tap on the floor with his wand as a signal for them to stop. He points his wand at a child and asks a question, to be answered by the child to which he points. If he recognizes the voice, the owner thereof is the next to be blindfolded.

4. Another blind game that is no end of fun is "Ruth and Jacob." Ruth and Jacob are blindfolded within a circle. Ruth calls out: "Jacob, where are you?" Jacob answers: "Here I am." Guided by his voice, she catches him, while he tries to evade her by listening to her movements. Ruth and Jacob must constantly call out to each other.

5. Ring Game. A number of children form a circle and hold a cord or rope on which a ring has been placed. The players pass the ring back and forth and the seeker inside the circle must find out where it is. When the holder is found, the seeker chases him around the circle. The one who first returns to the place held by the holders keeps the place and the other becomes the seeker.

6. Guess. A child seated on a chair holds the head of another player on his lap. The stooping child places his hand in back of him. The other children at a signal from the one in the chair strike his hand. The stooping child, by turning quickly around, must discover which one struck him. If he guesses correctly, they exchange places.

7. Potato Race. Have you heard of the fun to be had having a potato race? Place the potatoes in two rows. Two players start at the signal and pick up the potatoes, one at a time, with a spoon, placing it in a basket at the head of the row. The one who finishes first wins the heat. Then the winners of the different heats race until the champion is chosen.

8. Santa Claus. Secure a large picture of Santa Claus. Give each child a picture of Santa Claus' bag and see who, blindfolded, can come the nearest to pinning his bag in his hand. When a youngster pins his bag to a curtain on the opposite end of the room, there will be no end of laughter.

9. Peanut Game. A good way to entertain a troop of children is to hide a large quantity of nuts all over the room, and the one who finds the greatest number wins the prize.

10. Fagot Party. If you are fortunate enough to have a grate fire, give each guest a fagot. As each fagot is thrown in the fire the owner must entertain the crowd while it burns. He may sing, dance, tell a story, do the clown act, just so long as he does his best to give the others a good time.

11. A Surprise. If you play this funny game, it will afford a great deal of hilarity to all—well, if not to all, then to all but the victims. Tell everyone in the room that you are going to give them the name of some animal whose cry they are to imitate all together at a given signal. To all but one child you say: "Keep perfectly silent." To this one you give the command: "Make a noise like a rooster." You say you will count one, two, three, and at the "three" all should act their part. Of course, a rooster's crow is the only cry given, and a hearty laugh will inform the victim that the joke is on him.

12. Here is another clever game. Tack large pieces of paper on a board. Supply each child with a piece of charcoal. Each child in turn, blindfolded, draws a picture of Santa Claus. As each one finishes his production it is pinned up. Then the judges decide which has executed the best drawing of our good friend, St. Nicholas.

13. Modeling Santa's Reindeer. You can purchase some modeling clay at any art store. Present each child with a quantity and a piece of heavy paper to place it on, and tell him to model one of Santa's reindeer. You will be surprised what good results some of the little folks will produce, and how much they enjoy doing it, while some of the reindeer will be so funny they will cause no end of amusement.

And here are a few games of a quieter nature that form a pleasant pastime for the children as they sit around the holly decorated room.

14. Christmas. Provide each one with some paper and a nicely sharpened pencil and tell them to see how many words they can make out of the word "Christmas." The little folks will secure a longer list than you would think possible. Of course, you can take also words such as Santa Claus, Reindeer, Northland, sleigh, bells, or any other appropriate word you choose.

15. A Telegram. This is a fascinating game. Pass telegram blanks and have the children compose a telegram consisting of words beginning with the letters in "Christmas"—that is, the first word commencing with C, the next with H, and so on. The telegrams are collected and signed. Then they are read by one of the party and all vote for the best telegram.

16. Beans. The old game of guessing the number of beans in a jar is just as popular as it ever was. The guessers are to hand in to the judge their name and their estimate on a slip of paper.

17. Poetry Contest. Let the children write a short rhyme of four or eight lines about Santa Claus or Christmas. Select your judges and have the verses read aloud. Children of eight years frequently write entertaining little rhymes.

18. A Letter. Ask the children to write a letter to Santa Claus, thanking him for his gifts. Tell them to make it as funny and original as possible. Give a prize for the best letter.

19. Sharp Eyes. Place a large number of good things to eat on a table, allow the children to take a look for about two minutes, cover the table and ask them to write a list of all the things they saw before them. The same game might be played, only using vials filled with strongly scented liquids, such as camphor, ammonia, arnica, bay rum, rhubarb, oil of cloves, essence of peppermint, alcohol, oil of cinnamon, and others you can find in your medicine chest. Pass one vial around at a time, allowing the child to write down the contents.

THE BRIDE'S FIRST CHRISTMAS

Copyright 1912, by J. J. Robinson

WHEN the little bride, warmly flushed as to face, a bit disheveled as to hair, flings open the dining room door on Christmas day to a troop of his relatives or hers, nobody will ever suspect that she is suffering as keenly from stage-fright as any star on her opening night. She is at ease about the table appointments. The shining new silver is properly placed, to the fraction of an inch; the decorations are simple yet cheerily Christ-masy; the monogrammed linen is faultlessly glossy.

But the turkey, sly and mysterious bird—will he fall away in succulent slices from the carving knife, or will he prove a tough old fowl to be whittled and hacked into submission? And did she forget to put salt in the stuffing? And would the jelly stay jelled?

The chief reason for her concern may be largely overcome if the bride will take note of a few characteristics of a dead turkey and be sure that she is getting a young, tender one, instead of leaving the matter to the butcher.

BUYING THE TURKEY.

The flexibility of the breast bone is the first test. If the bone is soft and pliable the fowl is young. If it is hard and unyielding you may be sure he will not prove tender. Unscrupulous butchers have a trick of breaking the breast-bone to deceive the unwary. A great many pin feathers also indicate a comparatively young bird. Another good way to test the fowl is by an examination of the crop. If any long, coarse hairs are found you can rest assured the bird is an old one. A fine skin, that breaks easily under the wings is another indication by which the younger turkey may be distinguished.

A mistaken idea which even many experienced housewives have is that the cock turkey is of better flavor than the hen. Providing the hen is young and plump, the meat will be found much sweeter and more tender than that of the cock.

The preparation of the turkey is usually a strange and uncertain ceremony for the inexperienced. Cook books are not illuminating on this point usually dismissing the matter with an airy "Prepare the same as chicken" or "Dress in the usual way." The following method has always been used by a woman whose grandchildren testify to its perfection.

ROASTING THE TURKEY.

After washing, wipe the turkey dry, inside and out, with a clean cloth; rub the inside with some salt; then stuff the breast and body. Sew up the turkey with a strong thread, tie the legs and wings to the body; rub it over with a little flour; place in dripping pan, pour in a cup of boiling water, set in oven. Baste the turkey often, turning it around occasionally, so that every part will be uniformly baked. When pierced with a fork and the liquor runs out perfectly clear, the bird is done. If any part is likely to scorch, pin over it a piece of buttered white paper.

A fifteen pound turkey requires between three and four hours to bake.

When you put the turkey in to roast, put the neck, heart, liver and gizzard into a stew pan with a pint of water; boil until tender; take them out of the water, chop the heart, gizzard and liver and throw away the neck. Return the chopped pieces to the liquor in which they were stewed. Set it to one side, and when the turkey is done, add to the gravy, after first skimming off the fat from the surface of the dripping pan; set it all over the fire, boil three minutes and thicken with flour.

SIMPLE STUFFING FOR THE FOWL.

Cut the brown crusts from pieces of stale bread, put into a suitable dish and pour tepid water (not warm) over it; let it stand one minute. Now take up a handful at a time and squeeze it hard and dry with both hands. When all is pressed dry, toss it up lightly through your fingers; add about a teaspoonful of salt and pepper, also a teaspoonful of summer savory, and the same amount of sage. Add one-half cupful of melted butter and a beaten egg. Work thoroughly all together, and it is ready for dressing fowls, fish or meat.

DELICIOUS CHRISTMAS PUDDING.

Steamed Pudding.

One cup of sweet milk, one cup raisins, one cup molasses, one-half cup butter, 3 cups flour, one-half teaspoonful salt, and one-half teaspoonful of soda. Steam two hours. Foam Sauce. One cup of pulverized sugar, two eggs. Beat the sugar and yolks together in a bowl that has been set in boiling water. Stir until hot. Then add the whites beaten stiffly. Put small piece of butter and a tablespoonful of brandy in a dish and pour over them the sugar and eggs just before serving.

Suet Pudding.

One cup of sweet milk, one cup of chopped suet, or one-half cup of butter, one cup raisins, one cup molasses, three cups of flour, spices to taste, two teaspoonfuls soda, and a little salt. Use more fruit if desired. Steam. Sauce. Whites of two eggs beaten stiff, two-thirds of a cup of sugar. Boil a little flour and water together until as thick as cream, add a little salt and strain while hot, onto the eggs and flour. Flavor if desired.

Christmas Pudding.

Soak two cups of bread crumbs and sufficient warm milk to moisten thoroughly. Add one-half cup dark molasses, one cup raisins, one cup nut meats (walnuts), one-half teaspoonful each of salt, soda (dissolved), cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg, and a piece of butter and half a cup of flour. Put in a bread tin, cover with candied cherries. Steam for two hours. Serve hot, with this cold sauce: two tablespoonfuls butter creamed with one cup of powdered sugar. Add one egg well beaten. When smooth add pinch of salt, and one teaspoonful vanilla. Just before serving add one cup of whipped cream, blending thoroughly.

SOME NUT GOODIES.

Nut Mince Pie.

For this pie is required one cup walnut meats, two cups apples, cut fine, one-half cup vinegar, one-half cup of water or fruit juice, one-half cup sugar, one cup raisins, one-half teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice, cloves, and salt. The spices and sugar are mixed then add all the other ingredients. Divide into two pie-plates lined with pastry, cover with a top crust and bake in a hot oven.

Almond Cookies.

One pound ground almonds, one pound sugar, one tablespoonful of powdered cinnamon, one tablespoonful of powdered cloves, and one of allspice, five cents worth of anise seed, four eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and flour. Mix the sugar with the almonds, add the spices, yolks of eggs, baking powder, the whites of eggs, beaten stiffly, and flour to make a stiff dough. Roll out, cut into diamonds and bake in a moderate oven.

Hickory Nut Macaroons.

To the white of an egg, beaten very lightly, add one cup of sugar (pulverized), and then one cup of hickory nut meats. Drop on brown paper well greased with lard. Bake in a slow oven. Leave on paper until cool.

Hickory Nut Wafers.

For this recipe is required two cups of flour, one cup of sugar, three quarters of a cup of butter, one egg, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one-half cup of sour milk and one cup of nut meats. Cream the butter and sugar well, and stir into it the well beaten egg. Add the soda, in the milk, then the nut meats, and then the flour. Drop on a greased tin. Bake in a moderate oven.

HOW XMAS is CELEBRATED IN OUR COUNTRY

Copyright, 1912, by I. J. Robinson

Of course you know that Christmas is celebrated in different ways in different countries, but did it ever occur to you that our United States and her possessions have also a variety of ways of observing this festive day?

While in the cold North the snow may be piling high, and evidence of Jack Frost and his magic paint brush may be in evidence everywhere, down in the sunny southland the fire crackers, sky rockets and roaring cannon are heard from morning to night. There Christmas begins at midnight, and it is the noisiest, happiest day in the year. The soldiers march, the band plays, patriotic songs are sung and any northern stranger would surely think he was witnessing a Fourth of July celebration.

Although now Christmas is commemorated in all parts of the United States, in the year 1659, in New England, a law was passed that for a great many years prohibited the people from recognizing the day. This law said, "Anyone found to be keeping by fasting or not working or in any other way any such day as Christmas Day shall pay for every offense five shillings." Any one who even dared to call "Merry Christmas" was promptly arrested. And altho, of course, that is all changed, to this day there are men and women living who never knew a Christmas during their childhood.

In New Mexico, among the Spanish settlements, Christmas festivities begin one week before Christmas day. "Happy parties of young folks call at the different houses each evening. After entering the house they participate in a short religious exercise and the remainder of the evening they spend in having a jolly good time. The villagers celebrate the day by dramatizing the story of Bethlehem in the town hall. The rich and poor alike take part in these plays.

Did you know that the Shaker men and women do not sit at the same table except on Christmas day? Then after the church services they enter the community house where the men sit on one side of the table and the women on the other. The Elder presides at the head and says grace. Not one word is spoken during the meal. After dinner they all join in song, marking time with their hands and feet, and swaying their bodies. From these shaking movements they received their name of "Shakers."

would hardly call this a merry way of celebrating Christmas, would you? I think we prefer our jovial, festive family manner of spending Christmas.

The Pennsylvania Dutch call their Santa Claus Peignickle. One of the men of the community impersonates the part. He goes from house to house carrying a bundle of toys over his shoulder for the good youngsters, but also carries a switch for the naughty ones. Our children, no doubt, prefer to have their Santa Claus come down the chimney, and not walk up to the front door like any other man.

In Porto Rico the little folks believe that Santa Claus comes flying through the air like a bird. I wonder if before many years he will come to us in an air ship? The children place little boxes on their roofs or in the courtyards, and dear old St. Nicholas drops the gifts in them and flies by. In Porto Rico he is expected every evening for a week. Think of the children's excitement as they rush to their boxes every morning. But the Christmas celebration in Porto Rico is really a holy one, and it is commemorated with many religious ceremonies. The feast days beginning at Christmas last almost until Easter time. In the glamour and merriment of the day they do not forget its real significance.

In Alaska some of the natives have a pretty custom called "Gola" around the star. A large star, covered with bright paper, is carried around at night on a pole, by a crowd of men, women and children. They proceed from door to door of the well-to-do people singing carols. They are made welcome and invited into the houses and given refreshments. Since the United States owns Hawaii they celebrate Christmas the same way as we do. Only it is as hot there as our hottest July day, so of course they don't expect Santa in a sleigh and drawn by our proverbial reindeer. Their children look for Santa in a boat.

The Filipinos greet each other on Christmas morning with "Buena Pasquas." Here Christmas is also a great religious event. Religious plays called Pastores are given by men, women and children who travel from village to village.

And now as we have taken a little peek at the way Christmas is celebrated in different territories owned by our United States on Christmas Day let us give a thought of Merry Christmas to some of our brothers and sisters many, many miles away from us.

FACE A SIGHT WITH TETTER

Began With Pimple, Spread All Over Face, In Agony All the Time, Itched and Smarted, Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, Was Cured.

Moberly, Mo.—"My trouble began with a small pimple on the left side of my face and it spread all over my face and to my neck. It would be scarier red when I got warm. My face was very unpleasant, and it felt uncomfortable. My face was something awful. It just kept me in agony all the time. Some said it was tetter, and some said it was that awful eczema, but I rather think it was tetter. I had been troubled with it for about two years and tried many remedies but got no relief until I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment."

"When I would wash my face with the Cuticura Soap and apply the Cuticura Ointment it would cool my skin and draw great big drops of matter out of the skin. You would think I was sweating; it would run down my face just as though I had washed it. It itched and smarted and I suffered in the day time most from the heat from the sores. I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for a month and I was cured of it. I will tell everyone I know who has any trouble of the skin." (Signed) Mrs. J. Brookshire, Apr. 15, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. A single set is often sufficient. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 52-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.

ALL YOU NEED IS A CASCARET TONIGHT

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach, Coated Tongue or Constipated Bowels By Morning.

Turn the rascals out — the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases — turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A ten-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love to take Cascarets because they taste good — never gripe or sicken.

SOCIAL CENTER WORK ATTRACTS ATTENTION

Many Cities Interested in What Has Been Accomplished by Movement in Superior, Wisconsin.

Cities of Wisconsin and other states are watching with interest the new civic development work undertaken by the city of Superior under the direction of Carl Beck, the social center director secured from the extension division of the University of Wisconsin last summer.

With an initial appropriation of only $200 Mr. Beck was engaged for one month to show the possibilities in the social center work in cities. At the end of the month the business men of Superior were convinced of the value of the new work to the industrial, commercial and social life of the city. The public school authorities also endorsed the social center movement, declaring that it was a powerful aid to the regular educational work of the city schools. Mr. Beck was therefore engaged permanently to carry out the work he had begun.

A movement is now under way to throw open public school buildings for use as neighborhood club houses, gymnasiums, lecture and entertainment centers, branch libraries, employment bureaus and information bureaus, when not in use as schools. Neighborhood civic clubs have been organized among both adults and young people.

A reception to the newly naturalized citizens of Superior was given a short time ago by the older citizens of the city. Each newly made citizen was an invited guest and his supper was paid for by one of the older citizens. A feature of the celebration was a program of addresses made by the mayor, the superintendent of schools, a United States immigration inspector, a congressman, and a labor leader.

AIM TO MOTORIZED ENTIRE ROCKFORD FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The entire Rockford fire department will be motorized within the next twelve months if the city council grants the department asked by Chief Frank E. Thomas. Chief Thomas's plan is put forth as follows: "Remodel the four horse-drawn fire engines, adapting them for motor and purchase four new motor-driven hose and chemical machines. This can be done at a cost of approximately $20,000 and $35,000. The four fire engines may be remodeled and adapted for motor-propelled vehicles, as this plan has been carried out successfully.

The front wheels of the engine are taken off and in their place a motor tractor installed, the vehicle when completed resembling the aerial truck, with three wheels on either side. The rear wheels would be large with hard rubber tires. This would give Rockford ample steamer protection and a rapid means of travel between station house and the scene of the fire."

If this plan is carried out Chief Thomas will have twenty-two horses, four horse wagons, five sets of double harness, three sets of three-horse harness for sale. A neat sum would be realized from the sale of this apparatus and the money so realized would be turned back into the general fund to help pay for equipping the department in an up to date manner.

Two fire stations are now or will be within a few days completely equipped with motor-propelled apparatus, Stations Nos. 1 and 2.

The new Ahrens-Fox fire engine is similar in design to the motor pump engine at Station No. 1. This machine will be installed at engine house No. 2.

FREEDOM CITIZENS VOTE TO BUY MORE PARK LANDS.

Freeport, Ill.—At a special election held here the proposition, to annex a certain district to the park district in order that the park board might purchase Krape park, was carried by a majority of 1,007. There were 1,155 votes for and 543 against the proposition. The vote is merely a referendum vote and in no way binds the park board.

Krape park is one of the most beautiful spots in northern Illinois and will make an admirable pleasure ground. The property is now in excellent condition and as the park commission has enough money on hand to purchase at once, it will not represent any additional cost to the city.

The street car company has pledged to extend the car line to the park, should the proposition carry. This will mean adequate transportation to the new Oakland cemetery and to the Freeport club, as well as to bringing the street cars nearer Fairview Heights, one of the new and rapidly growing outskirts.

Another special election will be held Tuesday to authorize the city to issue bonds for $25,000 to increase the fire department equipment.

LARGE MOTOR FIRE PUMP GIVEN TRIAL AT RACINE.

(Racine Journal-News.)

The largest and most powerful motor fire pump manufactured in the United States arrived in the city yesterday and this afternoon was tested at the docks of the West Shore Lumber company and on Monument Square. The fire pump is known as the "Continental" and is manufactured by the Ahrens-Fox Fire Engine company of Cincinnati.

The fire pump fully equipped and carrying 1,200 feet of hose weighs 14,000 pounds. The engine has eighty horse power and each of the six cylinders have three spark plugs, something unusual in the manufacture of motor trucks.

The fire pump is placed at the head end of the motor truck, an unusual feature of the modern fire fighting apparatus. The pump has a capacity of 700 gallons per minute. The motor fire pump now here was built for the fire department at Rockford, Ill., and cost $10,000.

Three more motor fire pumps are to be tested here, before the city places an order for two fire pumps.

PAYS THE HIGHEST SALOON LICENSE IN STATE OF IOWA.

The record for the highest saloon license ever paid in the state of Iowa has been established at DeWitt.

Under the Moon law but one saloon is permitted to be licensed in a city over 100 in population. Last year F. J. Schlotfeldt was granted a permit, paying a license of $4,200 to the city and $600 to the county as a mullet tax.

For the coming year there was considerably rivalry as to who would be permitted to conduct a saloon in that city. This resulted in various bids for the privilege being offered. T. F. Reed offered the sum of $7,510 for a permit. Mr. Schlotfeldt, the present saloonkeeper, then announced that he would pay the city $9,000 and a mullet tax to the county of $600. The conditions are that the city is to be paid the license fee in monthly installments of $750 each.

This means that the license fee in that city is over $31 a day for every day the saloon will be open for business.

ANTIGO TAKES NEW STEP TO ACQUIRE WATERWORKS.

(Antigo Journal.)

At the council meeting held at the City Hall Tuesday evening, the city fathers took decided steps looking toward the purchase of the City Water Plant, by engaging the services of Arthur M. Morgan, of Chicago, to act as the city's representative in the appraisal of the water company's property.

For his services, which will include furnishing plans for increasing the efficiency of the present plant and an estimate of the cost of the needed improvements, and for an appraisal, Mr. Morgan will receive $350 and an additional $25 per day for representing the city before the rate commission.

In addition it is also provided in Mr. Morgan's contract that he receive $1,200 minimum of which $350 shall be a part payment in event he is employed to build a new plant.

AURORA POLICE ENFORCE ALL HUMANE LAWS

Aurora Beacon News: Chief of Police Frank Michels today ordered the arrest of all owners of horses who leave them standing in the street unblanketed for more than two hours.

With the arrival of cold weather the police have been kept busy talking horses off the street and putting them in livery barns. Many owners of horses are in the habit of driving down town at night and tying their rigs in the street. Instead of blanketing the horses they leave them standing for hours at a time in the cold.

The police in the future will take all horses that have been left standing too long and place them in the nearest livery. The owners will be arrested and charged with cruelty to animals and also will be made to pay the livery bill.

NEW WAUSAU CITY HALL IS NEARING COMPLETION.

The last load of stone for the city hall building arrived yesterday and is being put in place. Some delay had been caused because of its not having been received earlier, but now all that is left to be done is the putting on of the roof will be extreme cold weather. The contractors expect that the roof, the covering of which is subtle to a Milwaukee firm, will be in place by Christmas. Then should the heating plant be placed work will progress on the interior during the winter.—Wausau Record-Herald.

FIFTY THOUSAND BOND ISSUE FOR CITY PARKS.

Racine, Wis., Dec. 6.—With an appropriation of $27,000 a tax of one mill on all property in Racine, declared to be insufficient to maintain the public parks and purchase new park property during the coming year, the council has decided that the people shall at the election next spring vote on a bond issue of $50,000 the money to be used in making permanent improvements to public parks, maintaining them and purchase additional lands.

TO BAR NARROW TIERED WAGONS FROM STREETS.

The Lawrence, Kansas city council is anticipating an ordinance which will make it compulsory upon teamsters hauling heavy loads over the city streets to use wide tire wagons. A resolution to that effect has been adopted and the city attorney will draw up an ordinance to be submitted at the next meeting of the council.

Lawrence school men have become greatly interested in the new Montessori method of teaching. The board of education has appropriated $30 to be used in securing an exponent of the system to come to Lawrence and tell more definitely of the system.

Short Notes.

The Teachers' and Parents' club of Oshkosh has petitioned the Board of Education for permission to use the Merrill school building in the tenth ward as a social center. It is planned to hold afternoon meetings once a month with an occasional evening meeting to "further promote sociability and civic interest in the community."

The Antigo city stone crusher shows a profit of $355.70 as the result of its operation during the last fiscal year. The city buys all its stone, cobblestones and small hard-heads, from farmers. It paid for stone this year the sum of $2,433.71, and for labor $1,321.76.

There is a general clamor against the chauffeur who cuts out his muffler and thereby subjects those about him to the awful noise of the unmuffled explosions of his machine says the Chicago Journal. In Columbus, Ohio, it is proposed to overcome this by requiring all mufflers to be sealed by a city official, who will collect a fee of 50 cents, and if at any time this seal is found to have been tampered with, the owner is liable a fine without any further evidence.

Continuous storms during the past week or ten days, has stirred up old Lake Michigan and riled the water so that the supply furnished by the Racine Water Company to its patrons, is again considered unwholesome. When drawn from the faucet the water has a brown appearance. Until the lake gets back to its normal condition it is deemed advisable to boil the water. Officers of the Water company declare that these storms causing the water to become riled, is beyond their power to remedy.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

WHY WHO'S WHO.
(By Howard L. Rann.)

If John A. Archibald had learned to curb his fountain pen in the same way that he prevents his tongue from roaming around and shedding incriminating evidence, how much happier he would be and how much easier would some of our most prominent citizens rest at night.

Mr. Archibald is rear admiral of The Standard Oil company and also acts as chief disbursing agent whenever it is necessary to put a few puckering pleats in the plain people. He was originally hired as corresponding secretary, but his habit of framing his letters in the English language, instead of using a cipher code and changing signals between innings, has caused him to resign with a loud noise.

Mr. Archibald could have held this position indefinitely but for his own carelessness. One evening, at the close of an arduous day devoted to writing pointed billet doux to members of congress and advising them where to head in, John D. looked the safe and left his letter file on his desk. The next morning it was gone and with it several fireproof reputations. John D.'s correspondence is now being published in the form of a serial story and is causing numerous gentlemen to wriggle uneasily and explode vehemently.

As a result of this calamity John D. has quit writing letters and does all of his business over the long distance "phone. Whenever he wants one of his senators to pull off a chaf-douire or a coup d'etat, he gets him by "phone and uses the sign language. This is more expensive than gauge. It is more expensive than other system, but it does not rise up to lacerate the feelings of virtuous citizens in monthly installments.

Standard Oil has always made it a rule of conduct never to tie up to one party, but since it was broken up into small pieces, at heavy expense to the consumers of gasoline, it has been too busy figuring profits to pay much attention to politics. As for John D., he has quit politics for good or until the next election. The only letters which he writes nowadays are those confirming the weekly raise in the price of everything produced by the company.

WOMAN'S PAGE

SNAPSHOTS BY BARBARA BOYD

The Mother Who Is Too Self-sacrificing

SHE helped two small girls into the trolley and climbed in rather wearily after them.

As the two little girls pranced in, the passengers smiled. Their ruffled, snowy frocks were starched and ironed to perfection. Their white shoes and stockings were immaculate. Their bonnets were tied with smooth, shining pink ribbon. Their hair was carefully curled, and looked as if it had been brushed. No detail of their appearance had been overlooked or neglected. And of the pleasing result, they seemed quite aware, for they flounced into seats, carefully adjusted their wet skirts, and gazed about them for expressions of admiration.

The passengers glanced from them to their mother, expecting to see a happy, prosperous woman, dressed with equal care and style. But what they did see was a little tired-looking individual whose hair was twisted into a careless knot, as if she had neither time nor energy to comb it, and whose dress was old-fashioned and shabby.

And right there, one could see a coming life tragedy, woven unconsciously out of that most beautiful of all things—love.

For she was one of those self-sacrificing mothers who was laying her all on the altar of love for her children. She was slaving night and day for them—working that they might have beautiful clothes, toiling that these clothes should be well cared for, and the children carefully dressed. And to do this, she was woefully neglecting herself and her own appearance. And she did all this, believing she was doing her duty by her children and giving them what they ought to have.

And the children, too young yet to reason or compare, accepted it as their right, and were growing up believing their mother was made to wait on them and to give them everything they wanted.

And to a large extent, the world looked on and smiled and thought, "What a faithful mother she is."

But is she doing the best she can for those children?

Isn't she making them selfish?

Isn't she giving them a too-exalted idea of the value of clothes?

And having this idea, won't they, as they grow older, be ashamed of a shabby mother?

And when the years come, in which she expects to take comfort in her children and receive a return for all she has so lovingly and willingly lavished upon them, won't she, unless a miracle happens, discover that they are thoughtless, selfish, and secretly, or openly, anxious to relegate her to the background?

It is the fashion of American parents to worship at the shrine of the child, to humor him, pet him, lay everything at his feet. And it is the unusual child who doesn't accept all this as his right, and when he grows up, look rather indignantly upon his parents as being old-fashioned and out of date. Such girls make excuses for a shabby mother to stylish friends. Such sons pay a little heed to the advice of their father. "He's not up with the times," they think, and scarce listen to what he says. And all because these parents have grubbed like earth-worms, in order that their children might live like butterflies.

Would not parents be surer of the companionship, and love, and care in their old age, which they expect from their children if they would travel more closely with them through the years? Would it not be better to give the children, dress and associates in keeping with the parents' style of living, instead of developing tastes far removed from the home-life?

These little girls were already in a different sphere, so far as dress went, from their mother's; and as they grow older, the breach will widen. Many another mother is making just such a gulf between herself and her children. And when boys and girls thus brought up are grown men and women, there are no common interests between them and their parents. They belong to different worlds. And for the parents, this is a tragedy.

SAVORY FISH.

Any fresh or salt codfish may be served in a chowder, making a very acceptable dish. If salt fish is used, soak and shred it, then add to the chowder the last few moments of its cooking. Fry a piece of salt pork cut in dice; a slice or two will be sufficient for a family of four or five. Fry a golden brown, add a sliced onion or two and a half dozen of sliced potatoes; just cover with water and cook until the vegetables are tender, then add the shredded fish (a half pound is sufficient), a quart of milk and half a dozen milk crackers which have been scalded in boiling water. Serve a cracker in each dish of soup.

Flaked Crab Meat Fricassee.—Cook one small green pepper, finely chopped, two small onions, four tablespoons of butter slightly browned, one and a half cups of crab meat, and cook five minutes. Add five tablespoons of flour and when well mixed pour on a cup and a half of chicken stock. Season with two tablespoons of orange juice, two of lemon juice, a half teaspoonful of paprika, salt and pepper to taste. Just before serving add a third of a cup of heavy cream and the yolks of two eggs diluted with two tablespoons of cream.

Savory Fish.—Cut a two-inch cube of fat salt pork into dice and try out. To three tablespoons of salt pork fat add the same amount of flour and stir until well blended; then add a cup and a half of milk; boil and add a cup of flaked halibut or haddock, three-fourths of a cup of potato cubes which have been cooked, then the pork cubes and the yolks of two eggs. Season to taste.

Oyster Fricassee.—To a cup of oysters, reserve the liquor, and heat butter; add the oysters, and when plump remove, add enough cream to make a cupful, thicken with butter and flour blended, add an egg well beaten and pour all over well buttered toast. Sprinkle with finely chopped celery.

Salmon shredded and mixed with a good salad dressing, a bit of cabbage and a chopped pickle or two makes a fine salad.

Codfish served in a cream sauce with baked potatoes is a homely dish but one that is a favorite with many.

DIET FOR PHYSICAL LABOR.

"Could a man work in the harvest field on a little fruit, as you suggest?" a reader asks. A man who has been accustomed to eating meat and potatoes and beans and pie and cake and coffee, would probably not be able to do so well for a considerable time after changing to a better diet, but there can be no doubt that the elimination of coffee and the avoidance of incompatible mixtures is beneficial, and a large majority of authorities on diet believe that better work can be done without meat. The Japanese ricksha man, the Chinese coolie, the Hindoo letter carrier, running 60 miles a day, the Turkish porter and the Italian navvy, do heavier physical work, and work longer hours, than the American laborer, on a diet exclusive of meat, pie and cake and coffee, require much more energy to digest than a simpler diet. It is evident that better physical and mental work can be done on the latter, as all experience shows. However, changes, even for the better, should be made gradually. It has been found that the German soldiers can march better with sugar added to the ration, and the sugar fruits are superior to cane sugar, and ought to constitute not less than 60 per cent. of the entire ration. When he becomes adapted to it, a man could do better physical work requiring endurance on a ration consisting of sugar fruit and dry bread, than on the ordinary mixture eaten by the average farmer. I expect soon to make a practical demonstration of this, as I have demonstrated other principles that were much disputed.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

MAN AND SUPERMAN.

EVERY once in a while the telephone at our house has a spasm of ringing two. A dozen times in succession the short, staccato two will ring out, reflecting the impatience of the operator and of the party at the other end of the line.

"Two" lives across the street, and very often during one of these spasms I look out and see a light, if it is evening, or some other sign of life if it is in the daytime, and then I know what the unanswered telephone probably signifies, and I am both sorry and ashamed for one of my "sisters under the skin."

For this is what "two's" refusal to answer the telephone means: "Two" is an eligible young bachelor. He makes friends among the fair sex very easily and tires of them with equal facility. Unfortunately some of them do not always tire so quickly. The party at the other end of the persistent telephone is one of these. She is always making some pretext to call him up on the telephone, and the result is that when he feels reasonably sure she is on the wire he sits calmly smoking and reading while the phone calls and calls and calls, until everyone else on the line is close to nervous prostration.

Poor little girl! I can't help being sorry for her when I think how desperate and unhappy she must feel to be so shamelessly persistent. And, yet again, I can't help being ashamed, as any of us instinctively are, for those of our sisters who go against the dearest tradition of the sex—that woman must seem at least, to be the pursued and not the pursuer.

You notice I say SEEM. Most women do actually pursue their mates to a certain extent. One of the most modest women I know said, "That is the man for me" the first time she saw the man who is now her husband, and proceeded to stalk him in a strictly feminine way. Yet he thinks he showed wonderful taste in selecting her from a crowd of attractive girls, and remarks in a winning way, "For in spite of the fact that she hunted him in a feminine way, never once did she make any open move that looked like pursuit."

I have heard it said that a man sometimes marries a girl because he feels flattered at her open showing of liking. I don't imagine that happens very often, and I am pretty sure that when it does, there wasn't any other attractive girl about who was appealing to the normal instinct of pursuit in that man.

Perhaps it would be a much better world if men and women each openly sought their mates. But we are living in the world as it is, and in that world there is nothing surer than that the real man wants to hunt out his own mate, and that the moment he suspects he is being hunted he dislikes the huntress. "They also serve who only stand and wait" is a sentiment which it is well to remember in a great many relations of life, but in none is it half so important as this.

To Save Money.
A great many people would like to save money, but feel they cannot spare $5 or $10 to start an account.

The United States postal savings cards make it easy to start and you will be surprised to see how often you can spare 10 cents for a stamp. Buy a postal savings card, then buy one or two stamps whenever you can. Nine stamps will fill it, as the card has one stamp on it when you buy it. When the card is filled you can start an account at the postoffice where you buy the cards. You can draw the money out at any time. It is a good way to save for Christmas, or to teach children to save.

Gift Ideas.
A DRESS BAG makes a useful gift for protecting a gown when hanging in the closet, having a large buttonhole at the top for the hook of the hanger to slip through. The bag is made of flowered muslin. Take a piece 30 inches wide and long enough to cover the gown on both sides, with a 10-inch fold at the ends. This protects the hem of the gown when the case has been slipped over. The two ends are up and fastened by buttoning. To make this bag, sew up the sides and hem the ends, working three buttonholes in each hem. Sew buttons on case to correspond, put the hanger in top of bag, slip hook through buttonhole, wrap with ribbon to correspond with color in bag. A Dainty DANCING CAP may be made by cutting a piece of net in circular form, 21 inches in diameter, and a similar piece from a desired color of rayon. These are basted together and a hem of two inches is made, then edged with lace. Just above hem a piece of narrow heading is sewed, through which rubber to fit the head is drawn. Rosettes or a few ribbon roses complete it.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: How can I prevent mother's marriage when I don't like the man she is going to marry? (2)—What would be a nice Christmas present for a girl friend? (3)—Is it any business of a neighbor if I wear my hair over my ears. (4)—Is serge to be worn this winter? (5)—Is my writing fair?

BLUE EYES.
(1)—Your mother is older and wiser than you are dear girl, and she is the one to be suited in the matter of her husband—not you. The best thing for you to do is to make friends with the man and help your mother's happiness.

(2)—The stores are full of pretty things now. You can't fail to find something both suitable and reasonable in price. (3)—No. (4)—Yes. (5)—Yes.

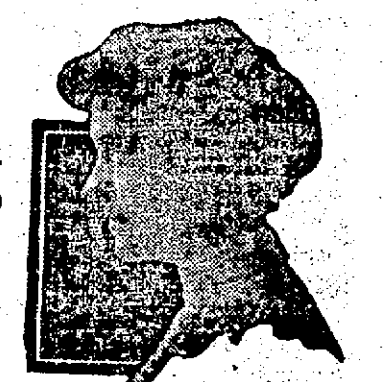

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—I am a boy 6 feet 5 inches tall. There is a nice looking girl I would like to go with, with the intention of getting married. How can I win her love? (2)—Should a girl wear a man's jewelry? (3)—Can a girl spoil a boy? (4)—I am a Luxemburger. Would it be all right for me to marry a girl who has made fun of by calling her "Miss Idiot"? She is a nice girl and I like her very well.

(1)—Visit her as often as you can. Tell her how much you think of her. Give her nice presents—nothing expensive, but things that will show her you are thinking of her. Take her out to some place of entertainment once in a while. Then, as soon as she seems to like you, tell her you love her and want to marry her. (2)—It is very bad taste. (3)—Not the right kind of a boy. (4)—What do YOU care, as long as you know the girl is all right?

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—I am 17 and go with a young man three years my senior. Would it be all right to have our pictures taken together on a postcard? (2)—(3)—Should you let a boy put his arm around you the first time you have ever been out with him? (4)—Should a girl of 17 marry a man of 45.

MARY.
(1)—It is said that people who have their pictures taken together surely quarrel. Anyway, you will certainly be sorry for it some day, if you do it. (2)—You perhaps do not know that your second question is not very decent. It would be decidedly wrong for you to take such advice. (3)—No—for any other time, unless you are engaged to marry him. (4)—Decidedly not.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My girl friends works in a hotel and when I go after her I always help her with her work so we can go to the show, but if I am not ready as soon as she is, she will not wait for me. When I meet any friend of mine and stop to speak, she walks ahead. When I call to her to wait till I catch up she will not. But I would wait till the last minute for her. Shall I go with her or not? A TRUE PAL.

You should not stop to speak to a friend on the street unless you introduce your companion. If you do not introduce her, she does right to walk on. She might be a little more patient with you if you are not ready to go out as soon as she is, but if I were you I would manage to be prompt. Perhaps she is busier than you.

day, Dec. 7, matinee and evening interesting and absorbing plays that have been presented to the playgoers of the world. It tells the tale of a woman's efforts to hold her husband's love and to what depths she will go in order that she might look beautiful in his eye. The character of Marie Louise is a type familiar to everyone and it has been said of the character that she is more true to life than any character in any play or book of recent years.

The play is one that appeals to the masses. It grips both the heart and the mind; dismissing its audience with thoughts active as to the significance of it all.

"THE GIRL AND THE DRUMMER." The Girl and the Drummer, the title selected for Mr. Byers' new play, suggests much that is prevalent in New York, both in the social and the business world. The action of the first two acts takes place in New York and of the last two, in Mexico. The leading roles of the "Girl" and the "Drummer," Miss Mann and Mr. Byers have parts in which strong, dramatic scenes predominate, with a dash of humor to offset the seriousness of the situations. Plenty of comedy fits deftly into the play, with here successful than their offerings of previous seasons. "The Girl and the Drummer" will be at the Myers Theatre, Tuesday, Dec. 10.

GEORGE C. BABCOCK OF CLINTON IS DEAD

Former Sheriff of County and One Time Resident of Janesville, Dies Following Short Illness.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Clinton, Wis., Dec. 7.—George C. Babcock, one of Clinton's most prominent citizens, former sheriff of Rock county, veteran of the civil war and member of the Knights Templar of Beloit, died at his home here early Friday morning.

Mr. Babcock was seized with a cold after attending the funeral of the late S. S. Jones last week. This developed into pneumonia and his condition was serious from the first.

Mr. Babcock was born at South Otsego, Chenango county, New York, August 26, 1834. He lived in the east until a young man and came to Janesville in 1853. Later he came to this village where he learned the blacksmith trade and went to work with E. P. Williams on railroad work, the railroads just being laid at that time. In the spring of 1856 Mr. Babcock moved to Iowa where he took up a quarter section of land in Mitchell county. He was married in the fall of 1859 to Miss Eveline Hastings, who died in the spring of 1862. To them were born two daughters who are now Mrs. Emma Green of Walworth and Mrs. Eveline Wheeler of Chicago. Both are living.

Mr. Babcock was married again in 1867 to Mrs. Susan Brand, who with another daughter, Mrs. Mayme Sayers, of St. Louis, survives.

In the fall of 1862 Mr. Babcock enlisted in Company K, 27th regiment, Iowa infantry, and served until the close of the civil war. He was commissioned a first lieutenant May 4, 1865. At the end of the war he came back to Clinton where he lived until the fall of 1888 when he was elected sheriff of Rock county and moved to Janesville. After serving his term as sheriff, Mr. Babcock came back to this village, where he had since made his home.

Mr. Babcock was a member of Good Samaritan lodge, No. 135 of Clinton, Knights Templar, Commandery No. 6, Beloit, and also was a member of

VENUS OF MILO ONCE HAD POSSESSED ARMS

Jean Alcard, as Result of Researches, Gives Explanation of Longstanding Mystery.

Jean Alcard, the Academician, supplies as the result of his researches a definitive explanation of the fact that the celebrated Venus of Milo has no arms. Some have supposed that the goddess lacked arms because the sculptor, twenty centuries ago, feared to complete his work, thinking that his inspiration would not last long enough to enable him to make arms sufficiently beautiful to match the rest. Others have suggested that she held a lance in her hand as "Venus Victorious," or repelled a lover, who formed originally part of a group with her.

But M. Alcard declares that Venus had arms as lovely as her body. With her right hand she held up her drapery; in her left was an apple. Venus was discovered in 1820 by a peasant who was digging his field in the island of Milo. She was in a sort of crypt or grotto. Vaguely realizing the value of the marble, the peasant carried away the top part of his cottage. There is seen later by a French naval ensign. The white marble, pure as a lily, stood out in all its exquisite perfection from the foul-smelling smoky hovel, barely lighted by a tiny window.

Informed of the pure beauty of the statue, the Marquis de Riviere, the French Ambassador at Constantinople, sent his first secretary to obtain it. The envoy arrived barely in time. The priceless marble was being dragged along by a party of Greek and Turkish sailors to an Ottoman brig. The French diplomat landed men from the schooner in which he had arrived, and captured the treasure after a fight. But it was roughly handled by the sailors it getting it on board, and the arms were broken. Portions lay upon the beach of Milo and were never recovered. This is why Venus is armless in her solemn resting-place in the Louvre.

This version of the facts of Venus's possession of the celebrated statue has never before been made public, owing to a fear of diplomatic complications. When the French secretary arrived at Milo, the lower part of the figure was already on board the Ottoman brig, and it required seats and a gift of money to obtain its transfer to the schooner. A month later the complete goddess (save the arms) was carried ashore at Marseilles enroute for Paris.

Afterthought.

A small boy offered the following prayer before retiring: "God bless papa and mamma, and sister Mildred, and Rosa, the cook, and Mary, the nurse. Oh, no, Lord, you needn't trouble to bless Mary, after all, 'cause she left this morning."

The Busy Woman's Day.

Her bladder gives her trouble too. Foley Kidney Pills will cure all that and make her strong and well. Mrs. Lena Beyer, 12 Frederick St., Auburn, N. Y. His accompaniments were very sympathetic and his solos were given with splendid interpretation. It is hoped by all music lovers of Bartlesville that these artists will return at an early date.

Mr. Connors will give a recital at Myers Theatre, Thursday evening at 8:15 assisted by Miss Virginia Listemann, the famous soprano and Mr. Bernhard Listemann, who is most favorably known as the Dean of American Violinists.

The program selected by Mr. Connors for his concert is one that will bring out the talents of all the artists, and to them who are interested in the best in the high class music should not miss this most excellent concert at Myers Theatre, Thursday evening.

SUMPTUOUS VERSAILLES.

Views of entrancing beauty are promised by Lyman H. Howe in his new program at the Myers Theatre, on Dec. 25 and 26, matinee Wednesday, Dec. 25. One series consists of a magnificent reproduction of the historical palace of Versailles, both of the exterior and interior, the parks and marvelous fountains in play. The famous Gallery of Mirrors, the bedrooms of Louis XIV, also Louis XV's study and clock room, will be revealed. The scenes are so perfect photographically and at the same time reproduced so accurately in the myriad tints of nature that the eye and brain accept them as reality even without the excellent mechanical, musical and vocal "effects" that accompany them for the purpose of conveying conviction through the ear also.

A thrilling hydroplane race with an 800-horse power motor boat at Monte Carlo; the whaling industry; "Our friends, the bees"; a ferocious attack on a horse by an enraged lion during which the equine is saved only by the dead sure aim of a hunter at the crucial moment when the lion is making a terrific leap at his intended victim and the burial of the Main are only a few of the many other features included in the program.

"THE THIRD DEGREE."

"The Third Degree" process of ex-otting confessions dates back to long before the Christian era. Was practiced during the Caesar regime. It was instituted in Spain by Ferdinand and-Isabella when Columbus was promoting his first voyage, and since then has been used by the police departments of every large city in the world. This attack by Charles Klein is the first blow ever struck at the process and the recent ruling of the Supreme Court of the United States fully demonstrates the convincing power of the remarkable drama, "The Third Degree." Since this play was launched a little over a year ago, sweating and abusing of prisoners has been restricted in several states and Commissioner Bingham of the New York police was forced to resign on account of the publicity given his brutal methods. Chief of Police Kohler of Cleveland, after witnessing a performance at the Euclid Avenue Theatre in that city, announced that no more prisoners would be questioned until counsel had been appointed. "The Third Degree" with a strong company will be the attraction at the Myers Theatre, Saturday, Dec. 14, matinee and evening.

Have You Seen the Little "Six?"

The Car Which Has Established a New Price Basis of Values For High-class Automobiles

Premier is the first of the five leading makers to establish this new price basis among high grade builders.

All five of these leading makers have earned their position in the trade by years of experience and successful building of motor cars which the public has recognized as the best in America.

Not one of the remainder of these five makers has a six-cylinder car AS YET listing within $1200 of the Premier.

What company with a six-cylinder car listing within $1200 of the price of Premier has, during the time of the popularity of the four-cylinder cars, been able to successfully market their fours for more than $1600 to $2000?

Taking for example, a $1600 four-cylinder car manufacturer, who now makes sixes as a basis, what do you get besides two extra cylinders for their increased asking price of over $2800, which is an additional $1200.

Do these two cylinders put that car and its construction and material in a sufficiently high quality class to justify the increase in price?

Premier's most up-to-date equipment includes:

Electric Lights, front, side and rear; current supplied by independent generator.

Electric Horn.

Pneumatic Starter which spins the motor 150 to 200 revolutions per minute. At least 100 revolutions required in cold weather to lift the gas sufficiently to insure starting.

Five Inflator with reserve tank furnishing pressure for cleaning upholstery, etc. Convex body with concealed hinges.

Circusian Wheel Tool Cabinet in the corner of the dash to carry tool kit and on which the lighting switch and indicator, the starting switch and oil sight glass are mounted.

The Carrying Trans. integral with the body and frame, mounted in the rear, distributing the weight between both rear springs.

Battery suspended in a metal box in the center of the car, protected and out of sight.

Combination quick detachable and demountable rims.

Gasoline Tank Filter without removing the cushions. Gravity feed gasoline tank, avoiding the serious objection to the pressure tank.

Portish Eleven upholstered cushions.

Electric lighted speedometer.

Cocoa mat in 1-2 tonneau, highest carpet to match in 1-2 next seat.

Rolling foot rail.

A. A. RUSSELL & COMPANY

27-29 South Bluff Street, Janesville, Wisconsin.

The buyer of the Little Six Premier gets the benefit of all that the experience of Premier's ten years of motor car manufacturing has taught. This Premier is a beautiful car with all the luxury of riding and equipment the most expert workmen can conceive.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Gazette, Dec. 7, 1872.—
The Harris Works.—New Warehouse and Office.—The new warehouse of the Harris manufacturing Company, located on the block adjoining their extensive works, which was begun last summer has just been occupied and the officers of the company feel that their manufactured articles are now comparatively safe from destruction by conflagration. The building is 60 by 90 feet on the ground, two stories high, and built of brick, with heavy walls and gravel roof. Within the commodious structure are ample accommodations for storing machinery previous to shipment, besides affording space for depositing the twenty-five thousand dollars worth of patterns belonging to the company. A roomy corner of the building is reserved for the public and private business offices and within these departments are arrangements for comfort and convenience are excellent.

These improvements were necessary to accommodate the constantly increasing business of the Harris company.
A Benevolent Suggestion.—Burris, the tooth carpenter, complains that the poor of this city can't keep warm and wants the city fathers to make each ward a Christmas present of a car load of wood. Our impression is that that formidable document, the city charter, is an insurmountable obstacle between the doctor's beneficent design and its consummation.

UNCLE WALT The Poet Philosopher

Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams
BY WALT MASON

"Remember," cried King Charles, undaunted, as on the block he laid his head; and men with doubt have since been haunted, concerning what he would have said. The headsman, in too great a hurry, cut off the sentence at its start; what message meant that man whose worry had not subdued his kingly heart? His farewell message to the people we'll never know but we are dust, and every British tower and steeple are crumbling into drifting dust. We can but guess, and grope and ponder, and wonder what the monarch meant, while he, among the bright stars yonder, is looking down in calm content.
Some kind advice, some admonition, he meant his dying words to be, to help his stricken land's condition, and set its wearied people free. "Remember," cried King Charles, the martyr;
then fell the ax, with awful thud, and Cromwell won, who learned to barter for honors in the marts of blood. "Remember," and adown the ages adherents of the royal cause, the statesmen, soldiers, writers, sages, will wonder what his message was. "Remember," through his ringlets curling the broadsword, shore his life away, "to do your Christmas shopping early," was doubtless what he meant to say.

IF TOMORROW IS YOUR BIRTH-DAY
Avoid new enterprises. A little more attention to those in hand will be profitable to you. Under the direction of others you should be deferential.
Those born Sunday, Dec. 8, will have good intellects, and will be fortunate in their undertakings, but should have the greatest care in their early training, as their faults are the social and frivolous kind that lead to much trouble.

THE DAILY NOVELETTE

Pretty Near Close
At last Rupert, Igglewich was about to marry her. Exclamation mark.
The rather red afternoon sun poured through the little church's stained-glass windows (the village children, throwing eggs and things against them, had done the staining), and the lazy droning of a bee was the only sound save the snuffling of the sexton, who snuffled from a cold and not sentiment.

"You remember, Rupert," she whispered, "how when I wore pigtails and you didn't wear much of anything we vowed eternal troth by the purling brook?"

"How could I ever forget, Angelina," he replied softly, "and ah, ah!"

and, you are still the same—those nose, that eyes!"
And at last he was about to marry her. Outside sounded the soft gurgle of a swallow, the scrape of a cow-slip.

"I remember well the day you first declared your love," she sighed.
"Twas on a Tuesday," Rupert sighed back.

"Enough of this, enough of this!"
cried honest Jake Cornully, the carpenter's apprentice, "if you're a-goin' to marry us, parson, start in a splin-d' and quit this here gasin'!"

For Rupert Igglewich was the minister.

It's by trying that you make your sum of his intentions and his choices.

Britain's Colonial Possessions.

The colonial possessions of Great Britain are divided into three classes —crown colonies, representative institutions, and responsible governments.
In crown colonies the crown has the entire control of legislation, the administration being carried on by public officers under the control of the home government. Basutoland, Bechuanaland, The Fiji Islands, North Borneo and most of the African and Asiatic possessions are crown colonies.

Baseball as a Tonic.

There is no subject talked so much about in this country as baseball.
There is nothing that is so much read about. War extras in the days of the rebellion were not more eagerly snatched up than baseball of to-day.
It is the daily diet of millions of people who think or talk about little else.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—And with Christmas coming too!

Bay Rum Fountain.
Not even Cologne has the perfume that is named for it flowing free. But down on the island of St. Thomas, in the West Indies, there is a fountain that gushes forth the great specialty of the place—bay rum. The fountain is on the balcony of a cafe and would attract more attention were not bay rum the dominant odor of St. Thomas. This town is the great bay rum market of the world, and everywhere it fairly assails the sense of smell.

Banishment Note.
A tested treatment that has been found excellent for ridding a house of beetles and cockroaches is made as follows:—Procure half a pound of Indian meal and half a pound of borax and pound them well together until they are well mixed. Place a handful on paper in convenient places where the beetles will soon find it.

HIS RISE TO POWER

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER.

Author of "The Man Higher Up"

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

John put his papers away and meekly followed to the waiting vehicle. Haig drove, chattering volubly of whatever came into his mind. But when Haig turned into the ridge road John stirred uneasily.

"Going anywhere in particular?"

"Anywhere you'd like to go?"

"No-o, I guess not."

"Then we'll go to the Hampdens. There's always somebody there."

"Oh, no, we won't! Let's go back the other direction. I like the south road better."

"Oh, you do! Why not Hampdens?"

"Well, you see," John began to explain lamely, "Hampdens and I aren't on very good terms and."

"Lord! Don't I know that? He spends most of his time enumerating

"I've brought him!"

the different kinds of fool you are. I sometimes think his list is incomplete. But what difference does that make? We aren't going to see him. There's a fellow up there—Gregg—that I want you to play tennis with."

"I haven't had a racket in my hand all summer," John protested.

"Macht nichts aus! I've never seen you play, but you can beat him. You've got to. He's got my scalp so often I have to take revenge by proxy. Besides, you need a little frivolity. You're beginning to take yourself seriously, and that's a bad sign."

"But I'm not fixed up for it," John looked at his shoes, upon which a thin coating of dust had settled.

Haig surveyed him and then stretched out over the dashboard a lean bank, the trower of which had not felt an iron for many a day. "You're a regular dude beside me."

"Oh, have it your own way," John agreed with as good grace as possible. He could not well explain that he and Katherine had been in love, that he was still in the same case though she had probably recovered, that he had persistently stayed away from her for the sake of his peace of mind, and—Almost any excuse for yielding will serve when one is resisting a weakness to which one both wishes and does not wish to succumb.

On the shaded eastern terrace they found a small group of young people of both sexes. Haig saluted them with a triumphant hail. "I've brought him! Now, you broken man, I'll bet you $10 he can beat you, best two out of three sets."

Katherine rose and came forward to meet them. Gregg accompanied her, almost with the air of a host, it seemed to John. They greeted the newcomers cordially, Katherine with such a notable absence of constraint that John, who had nerved himself for an ordeal, was rather heavily let down. He could almost have believed that she had forgotten the ride home under the October moon.

It was undeniably pleasant to loiter luxuriously in the comfortable wicker chair, watching the play of animated young faces, from whose freshness neither work nor worry had subtracted, against the background of green-sward and flowering shrubbery. Occasionally he tossed a light word on the eddy of conversation. He noticed that when he spoke all, especially the men, showed interest. That, too, was pleasant.

Later Gregg reminded him of the promised match, and when they had donned flannels it was played. John lost, although after the first set he gave his opponent a hard game. Gregg proved a generous conqueror, finding more excuses for his lucky victory than John could have devised. The latter enjoyed every point, especially when Haig, grumbling something about a "throw match," paid his bet. Afterward, in the physical contentment consequent upon hard exercise and a good tubbing, he stayed to dinner, a very gay, informal affair served on the terrace by candlelight. John was almost regretful when the time came to leave.

Late that night, going over the day, he found that he had talked a great deal with Katherine, but never alone. He was leaving.

"I am very glad you came," she said brightly. "You will come again?"

"And I am glad. I certainly shall."

Then it was he thought he caught a question flickering momentarily in her eyes. But the question, if there it at all, save in his imagination, was gone before he could make sure.

He was silent during the drive home, and Haig, busily humming the pilgrims' chorus motif, did not try to interrupt his thoughts.

Haig's parting shot as they separated was, "Now I've shown you the way, go up there often. You'll be a brighter and nobler man for it."

John went, not often and always in statu quo those of another advanced at least to a climax. Amid the cares of banking and trusteeships Warren Blake found time to contribute to the gaiety of the ridge—that is to say, he was frequently to be found on the Hampden terrace, an inconspicuous, often half forgotten listener to the nimble gossip and badinage. Had he been more obtrusive it is probable that he would have been snubbed into staying away. But one does not greatly resent the attentions of a shadow, and one day he proposed to Katherine and was rejected.

"Why don't you marry John Dunmeade?" he asked abruptly.

She turned on him angrily. "Warren! That is an—"

"An impertinence," he interrupted again evenly. "You will allow me this time. I'm not likely to bother you much again. You were in love with him last summer. And you aren't the sort that forgets. Nor is he, I think. He will go further than any of us—he'll go better. He is what you need. With me—with Gregg—you would be merely a pleasant incident. You know that yourself. I think you're fighting against that knowledge. Don't do it. It was the longest speech she had ever heard from his lips.

When they were hearing home she turned to him again. "I didn't know you and he were friends."

"We are not," he replied simply. "He doesn't care for me."

"You are mistaken about him and me," she said steadily. "But that you could plead for him when you—Oh, I call that fine, Warren!" she ended impulsively.

"I'm thinking of you," he said. "Since I can't have what I want, I want you to have what you need."

When he left for more than an hour she sat, chin cupped in one hand, gazing out over the green hills. Once "It's just a jumble," she sighed.

"What I want, I wish I weren't so—I wish he— She did not indicate what she wished, and she was not referring to Warren Blake.

Senator Mitchell, after several weeks' absence, had returned to his "legal residence." On his roundabout journey homeward he had been interviewed by many reporters concerning a rumored revolt in the organization.

A few days after the senator's return New Chelsea was visited by a monarch. But he came incognito, with a notable absence of regal splendor. To Silas Hicks, at the station, appeared a short, square whiskered, alert man who asked to be taken to Senator Mitchell's home.

"Senator's out to the farm," Silas responded in the omniscience of hackmen.

"Then take me to the farm."

Arrived at the farm, he received another command—to wait. A hired man was repairing a broken place in the fence. From him royalty demanded to know the whereabouts of the prime minister and was told to seek him in the potato patch.

In the middle of the potato patch the visitor beheld the figure of his minister, arrayed in a pair of the hired man's overalls and a straw hat of enormous brim, busily hoeing. Toward this truly rural figure Sackett—for our monarch is no other than the president of the great Atlantic railroad—made his way, considerably to the damage of the vines beneath his feet.

"Careful!" admonished the senator. "Walk between the hills."

Sackett became more careful. "How are you, senator?"

"How're you, Sackett?"

Their hands met, to part instantly.

"What," Sackett demanded, "is the matter with Sherrod?"

"He wants too much," Murchell answered briefly.

"I was talking to him last week."

Murchell turned on him suddenly. "Told you I ought to get down from the head of the organization, didn't he?"

Told you that Adolphus and the Steel City are turning against me, that he wants to be governor and that the Steel people want I might for my job in the senate, didn't he?"

"You fellows," Sackett exploded irritably, "had better settle your squabbles or you'll give some incendiary the chance to step in and raise Cain. The trouble is, Sherrod is close to the Steel City organization, and the Michigan is trying to get into the city." The secret of the royal irritation is out. A competing monarch is making ready to invade his dominion.

Murchell smiled bitterly. "So that's it? For twenty years I've been doing your dirty work. And now at the first threat of competition you're ready to throw me over without a scruple. If you think it's safe! It isn't safe, Sackett."

Sackett's eyes snapped angrily. "I've my duty to my stockholders, of whom you are one. Can you keep the Michigan out?"

"I don't know, so I won't promise. But have I ever failed you yet?"

"I don't believe you can do it. You're too unpopular with the organization. You've been too strong handed. Things are ripe for a revolt. Why, you can't even control your own county!"

"When I give up hope for this county," the senator answered sharply, "you can talk. All that's been said before. How do you expect me to keep these hungry coyotes in line—by quoting Golden Rule Scripture at 'em? Do you want to go back to the old guerilla days, Sackett?"

Sackett stared moodily at his feet. Murchell took off his old straw hat and leaned against the tree. He waited until Sackett was ready to speak.

"About Parrott," Sackett said after a long pause, "MacGregor and Flick want him for senator."

"He's slated for governor. I like my job."

"But Sherrod wants to be governor."

"He'll take what he's earned and can get," Murchell said shortly. "Parrott can have Roseberry's place four years from now—maybe. We'll see."

"But they want him to have your place. They say," Sackett explained with that brutal frankness which we naturally associate with royalty, "that you're nothing but a politician and have been identified with a lot of unpopular things. While Parrott is a fine lawyer and could easily work up a reputation as a statesman. They figure he could get 'em more. And they don't care whether the Michigan gets in or not. They think they'd get better rates. And they're afraid that you and Sherrod with your squabbles will spill the milk. I'm afraid of that too, Senator. You're getting to be an old man. You've had enough. Why don't you—retire?"

"Old, am I?" exclaimed Murchell harshly. "Want me to retire, do you? Well, I won't. And I'll tell you why—because the organization, the power, is mine. Set your mind easy. I'm too old to learn new tricks. I'll not turn agitator like these dreamers and fellows with a grievance. The Michigan won't come in, if I can help it. But Sherrod won't be governor, and Parrott won't get my seat. I'm not going to give up what I've worked for all my life. You tell 'em that I like my job and that I'm not too old to run it. And, Sackett," he added, "play fair—day fair!"

Sackett left, wondering if in an enlightened, up-to-date monarch a prime minister could have more power than his liege. Sackett would have been surprised had he known that the senator's mind was not on the conversation just ended. He was seeing very clearly the gray-green eyes of a young woman and measuring himself against a young man who once had been.

CHAPTER XI.

With a Great Price.

JOHN was standing at the window of his courthouse office. The sense of loneliness was upon him again. It may be that the sight of Katherine Hampden sauntering down Main street in company with a befeathered summer gentleman had something to do with his mood.

Then another vision was accorded him—a fat white horse lazily dragging an ancient top buggy in which sat Senator Murchell, for all the world a prosperous farmer passing into age amid peace and plenty.

"A minute later came a knock at his door. 'Come!' he said.

The senator entered. "Afternoon, John."

"What can I do for you?"

"Humph! Don't seem very glad to see me. You might ask me to sit down."

John pointed to a chair. "Why hesitate? It's your courthouse, isn't it?"

"Understood, you'd taken a mortgage on it yourself lately," Murchell sat down, looking genially at John.

"So you think I'm a bad man and a disgrace to the state?" the senator inquired at last.

"Well, just about that," John said quickly.

"Told Miss Roberta I'm a bad man, didn't you?"

"I could have said that you are a shameful force in politics; that you have exploited a great party and the ignorance of the people; that you have built up a machine for the sole purpose of looting the state; that you have got and held power by compelling public servants to use the influence of their office to perpetuate your machine and by buying the votes of the corruptible. There's probably a lot more. If I only knew it. I've never heard that you used your power for any good thing. Without profession or business, you are a rich man. How?"

"Humph!" grunted Murchell, who had listened without display of feeling. "Doesn't mean much. You'd have hard work proving any of it."

"Home-Grown" Jardinieres.

A good vine of the sugar-tough variety growing on our garden fence produced a goodly number of large gourds. I was puzzled about utilizing them until I tried cutting the top off one and making it into a jardiniere. The effect is quite satisfactory. The big, round, bulbous-shaped gourd is of a dark brown color and takes a good polish. It has a pretty rustic appearance with its top of ferns standing inside of it—Suburban Life.

Fresh Air and Digestion.

Other things being equal, the woman who sleeps with wide-opened windows and spends several hours each day in the open air will stand a far better chance of being able to digest and assimilate a normal ration than she whose close room obliges her to breathe the same air over and over.

Side Lights On The Circus Business By D. W. WATT

(Copyrighted.)

Many years ago the only two great rival shows in the country were the Adam Forepaugh and the P. T. Barnum, and the bitter feeling that existed between the two great shows made the managers very alert as to the best country and towns which they might control. In those days the Barnum show got control of the old Madison Square Garden building in New York City and took a lease on it for ten years at $20,000 for eight weeks, and with the understanding that no other show could come into New York City and show in Madison Square Garden, which was the only available place for a big show.

Adam Forepaugh had always had his eye on New York City and was always on the lookout for an opportunity of any kind to get in there. When the ten years lease of the Barnum show ran out, the old building was in bad shape and the Barnum management notified the agent of the Vanderbilts, who were the owners of the building, that they must have certain repairs made there or they would not renew their lease.

Adam Forepaugh heard of this and immediately dispatched an agent from down in Indiana where he was showing to New York City and get a lease on the building for the following year to open there, March the 6th for eight weeks. As soon as the Barnum people found that Adam Forepaugh owned the only available lease for a big show in New York they immediately got busy looking for another location.

In a few days the New York papers were full of a new venture that the Barnum show had got into, that of buying a large tract of land up town farther and the picture of an immense building which they were to erect thereon, in time for the show to open early the following year. This did not disturb Mr. Forepaugh for he knew it was merely a bluff, that the ground and such a building as they were supposed to build would run up into the millions and there was no danger of that.

Mr. Forepaugh immediately set about making such improvements in the garden as he thought best, paying no attention to what the newspapers said about the new enterprise. It was only a few weeks till the management of the Barnum show came to Mr. Forepaugh and wanted to make concessions whereby the two shows might appear in Madison Square Garden together. Later on the arrangements were completed and the two great shows were combined in New York the following spring for eight weeks, but Mr. Forepaugh had absolute control.

In former years there had been four ticket sellers on Fourth Avenue side of the garden with small windows that only one person would get to at a time. I went on several days before time for the show to open and as soon as I got there there Mr. Forepaugh took me to the Fourth Avenue entrance and he said, "Now, Dave, this is all wrong."

I want you to sell all the tickets at this entrance and you get a carpenter close up these small peek holes" as he called them, "where they have been in the habit of selling tickets and build you a place there as near like a ticket wagon as you can, for I want you to attend to all the business on this side of the Garden. This I did and Mr. Forepaugh after the opening day of the show went back to his home in Philadelphia, for there was no one with the Barnum show that he had any love for and he didn't care to be there.

The treasurer of the show was a young man by the name of George McGleason who for years had been treasurer with the Barnum show. All the different ticket sellers had to turn into Mr. McGleason after each performance, in the main office on the Madison Avenue side of the great building. A few days after the opening I had several thousand dollars to turn in and while checking up with Mr. McGleason our figures did not agree. McGleason claimed that I was between $2 and $3 short. I of course knew I was right and so did he. While we were having a little dispute over it and getting ready to go over the figures again P. T. Barnum who was looking on said to me, "You couldn't work for me if you would work for nothing, or anybody else that works for the Forepaugh show."

I said to him, "Mr. Barnum if the time ever comes that I have to work for the salary that you pay Mr. McGleason and all the rest of your men you will be only too glad to get me for you have been in the business long enough to appreciate first class help." The hatred between the two shows had existed so long and was so bitter that Mr. Barnum could not see any good in any one who was with the Forepaugh show.

Later we showed in Bridgeport, Conn. Mr. Barnum's home town and winter quarters and about 9 o'clock in the morning the old gentleman came to the side door of ticket wagon and spoke to me very pleasantly and said, "Dave, this is pretty hard lines for a man who has been in the show business as long as I have for I have got about thirty helpers here around my place who are bound to see the show, and I promised them they should all go." I said to him, "Mr. Barnum you are welcome to all the tickets that you wish and the best will be none too good." I handed him a tab of 59 reserve seat tickets and said to him, "Mr. Barnum if this is not enough you are welcome to more and if this is more than you need you can return them."

He said to me, "This is more than I could expect. Mr. Forepaugh himself I know would not give me a ticket." He said, "Will this not make you trouble if he finds it out?" I said to him, "This is my own business to give these out and care for them and if Mr. Forepaugh did not think I had good judgment in these things he would certainly not leave it to me, and while he might not give them to you, he knows as well as I do that it is a courtesy that belongs to you." He thanked me kindly and this was the last talk I think I ever had with P. T. Barnum.

We opened the show one season in Philadelphia and were going to make the eastern country that year and that meant Philadelphia for two weeks, Baltimore for three days and Washington, D. C., for the other three days of the week. While showing in Philadelphia I received a letter from Dr. Warren from Washington, D. C., where he made his home, for a good part of the year, although his family made their home in Janesville and still reside here on Caroline street.

The letter was an invitation for Mr. Forepaugh and myself to take dinner with him at his hotel which I think was the old National hotel and was a famous one in those days. Mr. Forepaugh and I took dinner with him on Thursday at which he had invited three other friends. I can only recall the name of one of the three others present and that was Dr. Bliss. Dr. Bliss was the physician who gave up his practice to care for President Garfield at the time he was shot there in the depot. Dr. Warren and Dr. Bliss went down to the show ground in the afternoon and Dr. Bliss asked if he and Dr. Warren might not come into the ticket wagon and watch me sell tickets for the afternoon house.

They were both my guests in the ticket wagon for the afternoon and after I had got through with my work there I took the two doctors back all through the big show and back into the dressing room, which meant that I had shown them the show from front to back. Dr. Warren had spent many years in the mail service business and it seemed to me that he knew everybody in the capital city.

At the close of our run there on Saturday Dr. Warren and Dr. Bliss with three or four other friends whom I had made through them, came down to bid me good-bye and Dr. Bliss said: "You had better look out for us boys next spring for it is no two to one that we won't be out with the circus of our own. You know you have shown us all the ins and outs of the business and we are certainly in shape to start a show of our own." Dr. Bliss at that time was one of the most famous physicians and surgeons in the country and he had given up a large and lucrative practice to look after the president which he did up until the time he died.

The last year that I was with the Forepaugh show was the next year after Mr. Forepaugh died and it passed into the hands of the Barnum people. The new owners of the Forepaugh show were James A. Bailey, James E. Cooper and J. T. McAden who was Mrs. Bailey's brother. This year was the first time that I had an assistant in the wagon by the name of Jeff Callan.

"Jeff" as he was known around the show was a bright smart young man and while he was supposed to be my assistant he was kind of a general man all around the show. When anything had to be looked after Jeff was always called. He was up-to-date and capable to look after any kind of business, although but about 20 years of age. This year the show closed at Richmond, Va., and a few days after Mr. Cooper came into the ticket wagon and said to him, "Well Jeff I am going around seeing the boys to see if they want to go another season. What do you think?"

"Well, Jeff said, 'I like the business, but there will have to be two or three things if I go out another year.' " "Well," said Mr. Cooper, "What are they?" Jeff said, "To commence with I want more salary." "Well," said Mr. Cooper, "We will give you more. You will be worth more. What's the other?" "Well," said Jeff, "You know I have had to do all the mourning for the show all the season. When anybody got killed or died I was the one that had to stay back and look after all the funeral preparations." He said, "Do you know that I never buried one of the boys that I didn't think when I was lowering him into the ground that possibly I might be burying some mother's boy and she never would know what had become of him, because so many go under assumed names. No more of that for me," said Jeff. "A circus one day and a funeral the next don't suit me." Mr. Cooper agreed to Jeff's request and another new man was appointed to look after the funerals for the next season.

I did not go back to the show the next year and Jeff was ticket agent and stayed there till the show was sold to the Ringlings and then Jeff retired to his home in Bridgeport, Conn.

Prime Minister Khreddine passing on horseback once through Tunis, an Arab rushed to him, stopped the horse and clamored for justice. Amused, the minister listened and said: "Thy case is a well known one; I have studied it thoroughly and since thou wastest it to be decided at once, I decide, as in duty bound, against thee." Kneeling, the man kissed the hand of Khreddine. "Thou hast misunderstood me," said the minister. "I have pronounced against thee." "I have understood the very well," said the man, "but I am full of gratitude now it is finished."

A chaplain in our navy enjoys telling his endeavors to induce a marine to give up to use of tobacco. During a talk that ensued between the two the chaplain said: "After all, Bill, you must reflect that in all creation there is not to be found any animal except man that smokes." The marine sniffed. "Yes," he agreed, "and you won't find either, any other animal in all creation that cooks its own food!"

During Gladstone's last contest for the university, in the days of public voting, Professor Smith was one of the tellers. A certain don who never could manage his horse wanted to vote for the Tory candidates, Sir William Heathcote and Mr. Graham Haridy, but lost his head and said: "I vote for Glad—," then suddenly correcting himself, exclaimed, "I mean for 'Bathcote and 'Ardy.' Thereupon Smith said, "I claim that vote for Gladstone." "But," said the vice chancellor, "the voter did not finish your candidate's name." "That is true," said Smith, "but then he did even begin the other two."

There was a certain master of foxhounds in one of the English shires who was greatly annoyed by the awkwardness of one of the gentlemen who were always over the hounds. At one of the meets of M. F. "Certainly, my dear fellow," replied Mr. So-and-So, "but as I do not know them will you be kind enough to put tags on them for me?"

Tells of Fighting Around The Kenesaw Mountain in Georgia

Of interest to the old soldiers, especially to those who took part in the fighting around Kenesaw Mountain, is the following account of the campaign in that region, written from the scene of the battle. The writer, Charles W. Boothe, was an officer in the 22d Wisconsin, of which company E was made up of Janesville volunteers. Other men who enlisted in this city also took part. The account is as follows:

Headquarters 2nd Brigade, 3rd Div.
20th A. C. Powder Springs, Ga.,
June 27, 1864.

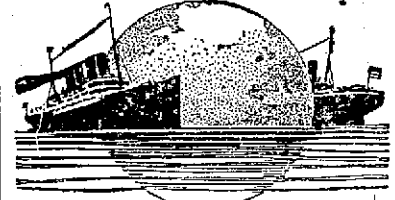

Dear Gazette:—This morning at seven the 4th and 14th Corps (on our left) advanced a mile and a half immediately in front of the Kenesaw mountain, which is strongly fortified. Gen. Geary and Williams division advanced, taking one line of the enemy's works. Our division (Gen. Butterfield's) held already an advanced position. The 2nd Brigade was behind the front line of the positions, having built there three days ago in the face of the enemy. Several advantages are to be gained by advancing the centre, the object of which was to cut the rebel line and force them back to take Marietta. The batteries of the Corps got in good position and kept up a continuous fire for more than three hours, and a general engagement was expected today, but owing to some thing the rebels failed to connect. The casualties of the Brigade are few in the past three or four days. The 22nd Wisconsin has lost but three or four men wounded, all severely, one I fear mortally.

The conduct of the 22nd Wisconsin has been admirable in this campaign. It is one of the first for duty and the last to let go its hold. Since the campaign commenced this Brigade has built 27 lines of formidable breastwork each line the length of the entire Brigade, and yet it has never had the pleasure of fighting behind but one, on the 22nd, when we advanced and built a line within two hundred yards of the rebel line. The enemy, thinking we had not time to build a breastwork, charged us, but found to their consternation that we were there, and they were repulsed with a heavy loss. The affair did our men good, as they saw the advantage they had gained. Lieut. Col.
